U. S. MAY DROP SUIT AGAINST WEIRTON

Talk Is Safe.
Asiatic Capacity.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

WALL STREET put up stock prices yesterday as much as four dollars a share in some cases. And 1,400,000 shares were sold "like old times." This means that the "wise ones" think the value of the dollar will drop, some say "as low as twenty-five cents," and for that still has dollars are to distribute. "I may as well spend these dollars while they will still buy something."

OTHERS, perhaps wiser, say the President and Mr. Morgenthau, his Secretary of the Treasury, will not let the dollar go so low, and, in any case, it doesn't matter what foreigners think of our dollar while it will buy anything in the United States, where there is everything.

ONE THING is certain, there is nothing in sight to make the international value of the dollar go higher, no matter what "prosperity" may do. Those that own valuable properties, real estate especially, should not be in too great a hurry to sell. What they have may be worth more dollars a little later.

IN NUMEROUS PLACES, numerous sorts of propaganda, Nazi, Communist, etc., are under investigation. It is desirable that the American people should know what is going on, although as a matter of fact, they have little information about anything.

At the same time it should be remembered that nothing is more dangerous than suppressing free speech, even speech in secret. The most harmless things that men can use are WORDS. If you do not permit that, they must use weapons more disagreeable.

The wise British know it and let a man talk as he pleases, giving publicity to any and every theory, as long as he does not advocate violence against an individual. He may stand in Hyde Park, say anything that comes into his mind, and goes home, relieved, having thrown no bomb.

YESTERDAY TOKIO and all Japanese newspapers were excited, naturally, about the news that American farmers in Arizona's "Salt River Valley" had ordered 1,000 Japanese farmers "to get out, and stay out of the valley."

The United States Government requests Arizona's governor to see that the rights of Japanese farmers are protected. Arizona has an alien land law forbidding Orientals not born in America to own or lease agricultural land in Arizona. The matter will doubtless be adjusted with proper respect for Japanese sensibilities.

IT HAPPENS that American farmers would not be allowed to own or lease agricultural lands in Japan if they wanted to, which they do not with ten millions of acres here unused.

There is no reflection on the Japanese or any other Asiatic people as a race. The situation represents the feeling of American farmers that they cannot compete with the Japanese or Chinese, which is rather a compliment than an insult.

IN GERMANY the suggestion that criminals condemned to death be allowed to kill themselves if they wish, and that the old "cup of hemlock" be revived, is made seriously by the ministry of justice. It is recommended in accordance with the ancient idea that "the last wish of a person condemned to death should be granted."

In this country we let the condemned man have ham and eggs for breakfast, or beefsteak, or whatever he wants, but "justice" puts him to death. To let him kill himself might diminish the general respect for law. A "hemlock oration," all very well in the case of a Socrates, would not sound so well in the case of a man killed for murdering his wife.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, anxious to help farmers, will lend twelve cents a pound on cotton that the growers have held in hopes of better prices.

That's a considerable improvement over four and five cents paid recently.

Senator Thomas, from Oklahoma, calls attention to the fact that the price of cotton depends always on the value of gold. That cotton price is made abroad. With gold worth thirty-five dollars an ounce instead of twenty dollars, cotton automatically is worth nearly double what it was when gold was cheaper.

LONG AGO the President and Gen. Johnson, NRA, let it be known that they had, as one objective, a 10 per cent reduction in hours with a 10 per cent increase in pay. The change has now been incorporated in the cotton garment code, the first "ten-ten" agreement.

Shorter hours, higher wages and reasonable inflation to provide more money should "prime the pump" of prosperity for a time.

NEW YORK'S latest strike is that of 5,000 workers whose business is making bathrobes. They want to work only thirty-five hours a week, which, under present buying conditions, is probably right.

The 35-hour week means 133 hours a week for sleep, amusement and self-improvement, a change from old "12 hours a day, 6 days a week" methods.

Dr. Steedle To Stay on Ticket

DR. JOSEPH G. STEEDLE

IGNORES PLEA TO WITHDRAW

Dr. Joseph G. Steedle today refused to withdraw as the Republican nominee for the Legislature from the Twelfth District.

His decision was an answer to the complaints of Independent Republicans in the district, who insisted that he withdraw because he has been convicted on vote-conspiracy charges in Federal Court and stands sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

Steedle's refusal was announced by William H. Coleman, Republican county chairman. Although Coleman said he preferred that Steedle quit, the chairman added that he would not advocate cutting off organization support from the McKees Rocks veteran politician.

Coleman and Steedle conferred today, after which Coleman said:

"He was very insistent that he would not withdraw. As county chairman I would much prefer that he withdraw as a candidate. If he insists, I will not advocate the cutting of the ticket, but will continue to support all Republican nominees."

Joseph H. Bialas, acting chairman of the Independent Republican committee, said the committee would discuss Steedle's stand in a day or two. At least some of the committee are expected to repudiate Steedle as a candidate.

Sunburn Forces Movie Actor to Bed

M'NAIR GOING ON 'JUNKET' TO FRANCE

Pledges Square Deal For 'Numbers' Writers

The case of Mayor McNair versus the people of Pittsburgh today produced these developments:

1—He announced plans for a trip to France to spread the propaganda of his city.

2—He expressed sympathy for numbers racketeers who complained that some policemen had kept their money confiscated in numbers raids.

3—He announced he would act as public health director while Director Ray P. Moyer is on vacation.

4—He prepared to warm up for his European jaunt by taking a week-end trip to Chicago and St. Louis to speak on single tax.

The Mayor today said he had decided to go to France to attend an international meeting of mayors in Lyons on September 15.

Pointing out the advantages of such a trip, His Honor said:

"Why shouldn't the Mayor of Pittsburgh be there? I speak all the languages and I can get up and give addresses in all the native tongues. We can show the world just what kind of a Mayor Pittsburgh has."

To questions as to whether he would finance the trip himself, the Mayor replied:

"Undoubtedly as soon as City Council hears my plans it will convene in special session and vote me a fat expense account."

HEARS NUMBERS MEN

By this the Mayor seemed to imply the Council would be pleased to finance his trip out of the country, but later McNair hinted he probably would pay his own expenses.

Before making known his plans for the European expedition, the Mayor voiced his sympathy for the numbers writers who made

Man Slain By State Agent

A man was shot and killed by a state liquor tax agent in Duquesne late today, according to reports made to Duquesne police.

The victim is reported to have fired first, after the agent, armed with a warrant, had threatened to arrest him.

The dead man was identified as Charles Robis, 60, of Wool street, Duquesne.

He was shot near his home. He died in the police station a few minutes later. Dr. L. H. Botkin, who pronounced him dead, said the man never recovered consciousness.

Duquesne police a half-hour after the shooting would not confirm reports that Robis was to be arrested for an alleged liquor-law violation.

Robis was shot in the chest, near the heart, and leg.

He was married and the father of several children.

ELECTION ENDS VET REUNION

The notes of a bugle sounding taps brought the convention of the United Spanish - American War Veterans to a close today at the Nixon Theater following a spirited election of national officers.

Judge Leon McCord, of Alabama, was unanimously elected national commander-in-chief.

A contest developed over the office of senior vice commander-in-chief. It was won by Robert S. Cain, Allegheny County treasurer, and past department commander, who defeated A. F. W. Seibel, of Illinois, 818 to 272.

For junior vice commander-in-chief, Ralph Edmunds, of Idaho, had 830 votes against 257 for George A. Marshall, of California.

HOLDUP GANG HUNTED IN STATE

BULLETIN.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(INS.)—Jack McCarthy, an ex-patrolman, and William Dailey, former lieutenants of the slain Vannie Higgins, gang leader, were sought for questioning today in connection with the $427,950 Brooklyn armored car robbery.

At the same time it was learned the police had found where the bandit leader stowed his pushcart and located a witness who could identify the robber chief.

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The frantic hunt for the bandit gang that staged the daring $427,000 robbery of an armored truck in Brooklyn Tuesday, turned today to New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Somewhere in those two states were two powerful automobiles manned by swarthy complexioned men and containing money bags marked with the prints of the Federal Reserve Bank.

Three fashionably dressed girls accompanied the occupants of one of the cars, a Cadillac sedan, which halted at a gasoline station in West Reading, Pa. The driver ordered three gallons of gasoline and one of the girls gave the attendant $10 in 25 cent pieces in payment of the 48-cent charges, at the same time requesting that the change be paid in bills.

SPIES MONEY BAGS

The attendant noticed Federal Reserve money bags on the floor of the car and also reported seeing a case bulging with small coins.

In Ocean City, N. J., meanwhile, an open Cadillac parked briefly in an open air parking space and an attendant observed two Federal Reserve bags lying on the floor.

Occupying the car were a hunchback and two companions who subsequently drove away in the direction of Hammonton, N. J.

U. S. TAKES HAND

The New York police officials in charge of the hunt were considerably heartened by the news that the federal government had interested itself in the case.

Assistant Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan characterized the crime as the best planned and most carefully executed robbery he had ever come in contact with in 30 years of service with the police department.

He places most of his hope for the apprehension of the bandits in the hope that there will be a dispute in the division of the spoils.

ANNA STEN . . . "I HAVE NOTHING TO DO WITH COMMUNISM"

BUTLER HOME HEAD QUITS

BUTLER, Pa., Aug. 23.—Supt. Fred C. Herold, accused of brutality to aged inmates of the Butler County Home, has resigned.

He handed in his resignation while two investigations of his treatment of the inmates were being carried on.

The County Commissioners accepted, and appointed James C. Barr the superintendent until January 1.

Herold previously had been suspended pending the investigations.

One of the investigations was ordered by Mrs. Alice F. Liveright, head of the state's Department of Welfare. From Harrisburg she sent Miss Isabel F. Pelly, who spent several days at Butler.

Meanwhile District Attorney Edgar H. Negley, with criminal prosecution in mind, obtained the stories of inmates who related instances of mistreatment and brutality.

However, with Herold's resignation, Negley is expected to forget about the prosecution, although the September grand jury probably will recommend correction of any abuses.

Charges of brutality filed against Herold by A. W. Bortmas and Peter Z. Ross, inmates of the farm, probably never will be brought to trial.

Herold had denied all charges and retorted that the inmates held petting parties at evening services and frequently asked about their sweethearts.

One accusation against Herold was that a cell had been built at the home for unruly inmates.

Man, 2 Hunting Dogs Killed by Lightning

JEANNETTE, Pa., Aug. 23.—Pete Bozzio, 35, and his two hunting dogs were found dead today in the woods near his home. They had been struck by lightning, police said.

When a storm broke last evening while Bozzio was training his dogs, they took refuge under a projecting rock. Lightning struck a tree above the ledge, then shattered the rock, killing Bozzio and his dogs.

RED? NOT HER! ANNA INSISTS

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 23.—Red charges against James Cagney and others have given Hollywood a headache second only to the cleanup campaign in the movies.

Because of their prominence, stars feel they are at the mercy of misguided or publicity-seeking individuals, who have only to mention the name of a film celebrity to hit the head lines.

Anna Sten, Russian actress under contract to Samuel Goldwyn, took measures to protect herself in advance today.

The blonde star's name was not mentioned in any of the charges, but she once was a member of the Soviet party in Russia and was trained in its stage and screen institutions.

On the set, where she is working in "We Live Again," a talkie version of Tolstoy's "Resurrection," Miss Sten declared:

"I have nothing to do with Communism or any other kind of political activity in America. I don't believe in your parlor reds."

DOOM SEEN FOR NRA'S TEST CASE

Department of Justice 'Unprepared' as Date Of Hearing Nears

Associated Press.

The issue of federal control of business was interlinked in four major developments in Washington today. They were:

1—Belief that the federal government intends to drop its action against Weirton Steel to what had been expected to prove a test of labor guarantee provisions of Section 7A, NIRA.

2—Evidences of a sharp dispute between high administration officials over the reorganization of the NRA, involving the question of "one man control." (Story on Page 4.)

3—Announcement of the organization by a group of leading Democrats and Republicans of the American Liberty League to combat radicalism and serve as a forum for those who want to guard personal and property rights. (Story on Page 4.)

4—Assurance by Secretary Roper that the Roosevelt administration stands for "just profits" and does not seek to eliminate the "profit motive" in business. (Story on Page 4.)

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Serious doubt that the federal government will press its action against the Weirton Steel Company for alleged Recovery Act violations has arisen.

Although the Department of Justice at Washington said the resignation of James L. Fly, a government attorney in the case, would make no difference, court attaches here disclosed that final preparations have not been made by the government.

The final hearing for an injunction against the steel company is scheduled to start in less than two weeks, but no steps have been taken by the government to subpena the scores of witnesses whose testimony was presented only in affidavit form at the preliminary hearing.

Discussing Fly's resignation to become general counsel for the

New-Found Escort Held in Co-ed Death

Fiance Freed, Cries 'I Love Her,' Then Collapses

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Harold Taylor, who took 19-year-old Faye New on an automobile ride from which she never returned, is held today for her murder.

Taylor was one of two men subjected to steady questioning after the Howard College co-ed's body was found in a ditch yesterday. The other man was A. B. Cain, Faye's suitor, who had said he followed her to the city limits as her ride with Taylor started Monday night. The girl had met Taylor for the first time only a short time before she went riding with him.

As Taylor was led away to jail, Cain was released. Police are convinced his story was true.

Miss New's body was found face up in a ditch into which Coroner Evans said she had been thrown after fighting for her life.

Two deep gashes in her throat, both mortal wounds, ended a struggle during which she was choked, scratched and beaten, an autopsy report said. The spot where she was found was more than a mile from where Taylor said she left his automobile after an argument.

Taylor, viewing the body, denied any part in the girl's death. He said:

"She was unhurt when she ran into the woods from my car."

Cain collapsed when he looked at the dead girl. To Chief Luther Hollums before the body was found, he had said:

"I love Faye and want to marry her."

Detectives checked both men's stories. Taylor continued to assert his innocence. Detective McCoy Helton said Taylor's shoes fit perfectly tracks found leading from the ditch where the body was found.

Suddenly, at 11:30 p. m., last night, Chief Hollums announced Taylor was en route to the County Jail, charged with murder.

Today the girl's grief-stricken parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lon New, will accompany their only child's body to their old home in Heflin, Ala., where funeral services will be held.

Girl, Fought for Life On Auto Ride, Clues Reveal

Hemsley, Who Socks 'Em, Struck Out by Policeman

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Ralston (Rollicking Rollie) Hemsley, St. Louis Browns' first string catcher known for socking fast ones on the nose, got socked with a fast one himself early today.

No umpires were around. Policeman Frank Doyle explained, and Judge Landis was nowhere to be seen when "Rollie" got rough outside a taproom.

The American Leaguer, who was formerly with the Pittsburgh Pirates was in no shape to be driving the automobile he had hired, Doyle decided, and when Hemsley began emphasizing his protests with swinging fists, the policeman delivered a sizzler to the backstop's nose.

Manager Rogers Hornsby, here with his team for a series against the A's, got his star catcher out of jail with the promise that he'd have him back for a hearing today on charges of drunk and disorderly conduct.

On his way out, Hemsley confided to Doyle:

"I'm more afraid of Hornsby than I am of the magistrate."

At a hearing later Hemsley was discharged.

CAPONE'S BROTHER NABBED IN WAR ON NEW BEER RACKET

CHICAGO ACTS TO BALK GANG COMEBACK

'Scarface Al' Facing Prison Labor on 'Devil's Island'

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—The police struck quickly to put down what they said they suspected was an attempt of the old Capone gang to stage a comeback in Cook County.

They arrested Ralph Capone, brother of "Scarface" Al Capone, and nine others here yesterday in a raid on a flat above a tavern in suburban Berwyn.

The raid was made by officers from the state's attorney's office after the receipt of complaints that Capone had reorganized the scattered remnants of his brother's old gang in an attempt to force saloon keepers in the western part of Cook County to buy a certain brand of beer.

Nine of the men, however, were released, including Capone, who insisted that he was "going straight" and had just dropped into the place for a glass of beer and was about to leave when the police came. He was running down the alley near the tavern when the police captured him.

Among the men seized with Capone was Edward G. Konvalinka, a Republican committeeman and candidate for State Senator. He denied any "muscle" work and was released after he told the police he had rented the raided flat as his political headquarters several weeks ago.

Konvalinka also said he had purchased a distributing agency for a brewery, paying $750 for it. He said:

"I have several employes out soliciting, but there has been absolutely no muscle work in getting people to take our beer."

The man held for further questioning was James Novak, who had been sought as a suspect in the St. Valentine's Day massacre in 1929.

Capone Put to Work On 'Devil's Island'

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Prison labor—48 hours a week of it—was in store today for Al (Scarface) Capone and 52 other convicts transferred yesterday from other prisons to the new escape-proof federal penitentiary on Alcatraz Island.

An eight-hour work period for each day except Sunday has been mapped out for the new arrivals, including the former Chicago gang chief, Warden James A. Johnston said.

The convicts who arrived increased the prison population to an even 100. They will labor in the prison laundry, the clothing shop, shoe shop, kitchens and at maintenance occupations.

In their leisure and recreational hours, they may study the San Francisco sky line, so close that details are clearly visible when not obscured by fog; watch ocean liners and freighters pass in and out of the Golden Gate, or keep track of the progress on the two great bridge projects stretching out across the surging water. Johnston said:

"Of course we're not going to entertain them. These men are all 'housebroken.' They are familiar with prison routine. There should be no difficulties encountered in establishing normal penitentiary life here."

The transfer of Capone to the new prison, which Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said was for convicts who attempted to maintain outside contacts at other penitentiaries and were potential jail breakers, brought a protest from his attorney at Atlanta, Frank A. Doughman.

PREACHER HELD IN KIDNAP HOAX

GOLDSBORO, N. C., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Hollow-eyed and dejected, R. H. Askew, 28-year-old self-ordained disciple of Aimee Semple McPherson, faced today a charge of sending ransom notes through the mails, after confessing, officers said, that his "kidnaping" was a hoax.

Sheriff Paul Garrison said Askew had admitted his abduction story was mere fiction and that he had sent notes to his 50-year-old wife and to Aimee Semple McPherson demanding $25,000 from each.

"I needed a rest and had to get away."

Thus Sheriff Garrison quoted Askew as saying. The charge was preferred by Department of Justice agents who investigated Askew's story. Unable to furnish $5,000 bond, Askew was taken to the county jail.

Federal agents served the warrant on Askew and took him before United States Commissioner L. E. Pearson, who set the bond. The "four square gospel" evangelist, clad in white cotton trousers and a white shirt, open at the throat, answered "Not guilty" in a steady voice.

Radio Crooners On Hunger Strike

MEXICO, D. F., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—More than a score of employes of Radio Station XEAL started the third day of their hunger strike today, but kept up their radio programs—crooning and all.

In the hunger striking group are artists and announcers. Weakly they stagger to the microphone to sing or make speeches against the Ericson Telephone Company—owners of the station.

Then they rest to gain strength for their next performance. The hunger strikers are remaining in the studio and day and night programs are being given.

The group demands two months' back pay which the company has refused them on the ground a labor contract was broken by the employes.

She was 42 minutes late, the delay being attributed to unfavorable weather on the channel route.

She accepted the job, she said, to help train herself for the coming race to Melbourne, Australia, in which the world's greatest distance pilots will participate.

A little over an hour after her arrival, Mrs. Mollison started the routine return trip to London with four passengers. The rain was still falling.

KINGFISH CHOPS AS LOUISIANA HAS JITTERS

'What Next' From Its Political Dictator, State Wonders

By ROBERT G. NIXON
International News Service.

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 23.—Huey Long's chopping wood and Louisiana's got the jitters.

On every tongue in this amazing state is framed the question:

"What's Huey's next move and when is it coming?"

In a history-making five days last week Senator Long whipped legislation through the state assembly that made him the state's absolute political dictator.

Huey commanded Gov. Oscar "OK" Allen to summon the legislature into special session, wrote more than a score of measures, instructed the legislators how to vote in caucus, and then, shouting for his followers to ballot affirmatively, saw to it personally that each measure was approved in both branches.

JUST CHOPPING WOOD

But all Huey knows about Louisiana's muddled political situation is what he reads in the newspapers. He's just a carefree senator on vacation from his congressional duties.

The man who has dominated Louisiana politics for seven years stood leaning up against the front of the Heidelberg Hotel, where he makes his headquarters here.

Huey was a natty figure in gray pinstripe tropicals, sport shoes and a straw hat under the brim of which a red curl dangled on his forehead. His hands were white and soft and the nails perfectly manicured. He didn't look like he had been chopping wood, but in reply to all questions, Huey explained:

"I've been chopping wood. Now there's real exercise. I need about 90 days of that to put me in fine shape. My wind's all right, but it gets me in the arms."

AND HE DIETS

Huey's on a diet. In eight months he has lost 32 pounds, he said.

Huey says the recipe for reducing is:

"I eat no bread, drink no liquor or beer, and get lots of sleep."

The Senator said he stopped drinking eight months ago, declaring:

"I haven't had a drop since."

Just then Gov. Oscar (O. K. Huey) Allen drove up in a big sedan.

"Let's go to town," he hailed. Huey scampered into the car.

"Well, so long. I've got to obey my Governor," he shouted, his face breaking into a wide grin.

The two bodyguards dashed into the car a step behind.

Sue Gas Concern For Blast Damages

CASPER, Wyo.—(INS.)—Because of damages done by an explosion of natural gas last December 7, residents of Torrington, Wyo., have filed suits totaling $48,986.95 against a Casper concern that furnishes gas to that city. Approximately 40 individuals, owners of property damaged, charge that the blast was due to faulty installation of equipment. Two business houses were wrecked.

Aluminum Men Reject Work Plea

MASSENA, N. Y., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Striking union workers of the Massena plant of the Aluminum Company of America yesterday refused the plea of a "back to work" committee to sign a petition favoring the reopening of the plant. The petition was presented at a meeting of 800 townspeople and strikers.

ALUMINUM CO., STRIKERS IN DEADLOCK

U. S. Mediator Hopeful Of Peace Despite Firm's Stand

Efforts to settle the strike of 8,500 aluminum workers still hung fire today as Federal Mediator Fred Keighly returned to Washington to report his failure to end the walkout at the plants of the Aluminum Company of America.

Before he left to report to the Department of Labor, he said he was still hopeful of bringing about a settlement.

Keighly's first efforts met with failure yesterday when the company declined to accept his peace proposal. The plan calling for immediate end of the strike and re-employment of strikers, with final arbitration of the issues left to the National Labor Relations Board, was acceptable to the Aluminum Workers' Council they said.

COMPANY BLAMED

Following the company's refusal, local American Federation of Labor officials issued a statement. It read, in part:

"The Aluminum Company's rejection of the settlement proposed by the United States Department of Labor is most only a flat denial of the workers' lawful rights, but also a challenge of the authority vested in the federal government by Congress.

"A deliberate attempt is made by the company to confine the issues involved in the present dispute. The company's insistence that the proposed agreement provides for a 'closed shop' is an outstanding example. The demand for a union shop (termed 'closed shop' by anti-labor spokesmen) is contained in the agreement.

"The strike call was left at the discretion of the Aluminum Workers' Council. The original date for the strike was set for July 25. Before the strike was finally called at midnight, August 10, the workers' representatives had exhausted every available means of settling the dispute peacefully. It was only then that the federation authorized the council to act in accordance with the vote of the membership.

"The responsibility of the strike rests squarely upon the shoulders of the company."

STAND OUTLINED

Rejecting Keighly's proposal, President Roy A. Hunt, of the Aluminum Company said the demands for "closed shop, checkoff of dues, universal wage rates and union agreements" were not proper matters for arbitration.

The company agreed to re-employ "as far as practicable," all strikers when the strike had ended, except workers responsible in the event of "violence or destruction of property." Hunt added:

"Resumption of some of the operations shut down by the strike is a very expensive procedure, and it may be economically unsound to resume some of the work."

M'Adoo Son's Ex-Wife Sues Mate No. 2

MRS. ETHEL M. M. KEITH

Her Society Husband Cruel, Mrs. Keith Charges

BALTIMORE, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ethel McCormick McAdoo Keith, daughter of Mrs. Isaac E. Emerson and divorced wife of Huber McAdoo, son of William Gibbs McAdoo, has instituted suit for a partial divorce from her second husband on grounds of cruelty and non-support.

She married her present husband, Walter Winchester Keith, Baltimore society man, in 1929.

Her first marriage was to McAdoo in 1913 and was dissolved 10 years later in Paris.

Custody of the couple's 4-year old daughter, Patricia, was asked. Mrs. Keith's complaint charged:

"The defendant has never contributed to the support of the plaintiff or the support of his daughter. From time to time he has indulged to great excess in alcoholic liquor, and his conduct toward the plaintiff has been extremely cruel."

complaints that some policemen made a practice of keeping the personal funds seized in raids. Said the Mayor:

"I don't know why this should be done to men just because they violate city ordinances. I'll look into it."

BELL DENIES CHARGE

This drew angry retorts from Safety Director A. Marshall Bell and Acting Police Supt. Jacob Dorsey, who emphatically denied that police kept confiscated funds.

Dorsey said all funds seized were turned over to him and placed in his safe, pending a ruling from the law department as to what disposition should be made of such funds. Dorsey revealed his safe held several hundreds of dollars of seized funds.

And then the Mayor announced that while Dr. Ray P. Moyer was away on vacation for the next two weeks, he would act as health director, in addition to his duties as acting city socilitor, Mayor, et cetera.

The Mayor will be in Chicago tomorrow to address the Henry George Club on single tax and then will go to St. Louis on the same mission.

LUCAS DEFIES LIQUOR LAWS SECOND TIME

Again Changes Charge To Loitering; Mayor Upholds Act

For the second time this week, Magistrate Anthony Lucas, in North side Police Court, today lectured state enforcement agents and police in their drive to enforce the state liquor laws by dismissing a confessed bootlegger on liquor charges and fining him $25 on a new charge of loitering.

The accused bootlegger, Angelo Anselmo, 22, of Hooversville, Pa., who had been seized with two pints of moonshine and who admitted in court that he peddled it, paid the fine for loitering and walked out.

Last Sunday Magistrate Lucas changed a similar bootlegging charge against Kenneth Fitten, 23, of 1024 Liverpool street, to loitering and fined him $50.

TO SEEK RE-ARRESTS

The city ordinances provide a maximum fine of $5 for loitering.

William H. Beachy, chief state enforcement officer, when he learned of Lucas' action, said he would seek to obtain the liquor evidence against the two alleged bootleggers and re-arrest them for prosecution on the liquor charges.

Beachy accused the police magistrate of exceeding his legal authority in altering the charges on which the two bootleg suspects had been arrested. He said:

"There is only one thing a magistrate can do in state liquor violation cases which come before him.

"One is to fine the defendant $25 or dismiss him under section 13 of Art 6, which provides a penalty for receiving unlaxed liquor.

MAYOR UPHOLDS ACT

"The other, under Section 7 which makes the offense a misdemeanor, is to hold the defendant for court. There is no legal authority for altering or changing the charges."

Mayor McNair, when asked about this practice of magistrates, said:

"I believe it's all right. We don't try to hand cases up to court. We try to dispose of them as fast as we can."

Acting Supt. of Police Jacob Dorsey said the action of some magistrates was "not very encouraging to the police department."

MORALS COURT UPSET FOUGHT

A report of activities of court social workers was to be given to A. T. Morgan, of the Council of Churches, today, preparatory to an appeal to Mayor McNair for reconsideration of the latter's recent Morals Court "decentralization" orders.

Social workers claim all cases of drunkenness, which the Mayor has ordered to district police stations for hearings, present a family problem that should be investigated by trained workers. This is possible, the workers maintain, only if all such complaints, made by a member of the inebriate's family, are made and heard in Morals Court.

The Mayor has expressed willingness to hear the social workers' protests.

TWO BOYS HELD AS SLASHERS

DEFIANCE, O., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Two youths were held today as suspects in the six cases of knife slashings of women that have occurred here in recent months.

One was identified by three persons who chased a man Aug. 14 after he had knifed Miss Maoel Kroft, but the other, brought here from Toledo, was said by the same three persons to be taller than the man they saw.

The youth identified, an 18-year-old former inmate of the state industrial school at Lancaster, asserted he was released from that institution July 7. Only two of the six women who have been victimized by the knife slasher were attacked after that date.

Miss Kroft, ill at her home, was not asked to view the suspect today. Joseph A. Eck and L. W. Watson, who chased the man who attacked Miss Kroft, told police the youth answered the description of Miss Kroft's assailant. Father Ed X. Goffe, a Catholic priest, said the youth resembled one who ran across the yard of his home shortly after the attack on Miss Kroft.

4 Girls on Picnic Bound By Kidnapers, Escape

OGDEN, Utah, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—An apparent attempt to kidnap four young girls, all members of prominent Utah families, sent police in search of three men today.

Accosting the girls in a wooded ravine where they were on a picnic, the three men bound and gagged their victims, but were frightened away when the sound of approaching horses was heard.

The girls, who freed themselves from the bonds after the men fled, were Jean Scrowcroft, 12, and Margo Spargo, 13, both of Ogden, and Eldeen Mulcahy, 13, and Joan Lehman, both of Salt Lake City. The girls quoted one of the men as saying, as they approached the party:

"Now we are going to spoil your fun."

One of the men was armed with a pistol.

After binding and gagging them with rags and ropes, the victims reported to police, the spokesman of the trio said:

"Now we are ready to take them."

Just then the approaching horsemen frightened the men away.

R. C. Moore, chief of police, said the men might have been contemplating kidnaping the girls for ransom.

Girls Stage Mass Hysteria Over Ban on Sweethearts

BUDAPEST, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Because they were not permitted to see their sweethearts among the troops of the Hungarian Army, school girls of the reformatory at Rakospalota developed what doctors diagnosed today as mass hysteria.

The girls, ranging in age from 12 to 18 years, began swallowing all sorts of objects from teaspoons to tooth brushes. They had to be given hospital treatment immediately and some were reported dying from the effects of operations to remove the objects.

The girls had been forbidden by the Catholic nuns in charge of the school to write their boy friends, so they started smuggling out their love letters in loaves of bread and in cakes. This subterfuge was exposed and punishment was swift.

Then the epidemic of mass hysteria broke out in the school, culminating in the orgy of swallowing foreign objects.

PATERNITY CHARGE DEBATED AFTER DEATH OF MAN AT 72

Pitt Cathedral's Full of Rats, So Officials Bring in Load of Cats

Will the cats bite the rats or will the rats chew the cats?

That's what worried University of Pittsburgh officials today.

It seems that back in the good old days, when hundreds of Civil Works Administration workmen ate their lunches in the Cathedral of Learning, the rats soon found out that the Cathedral was a happy hunting ground.

The officials are reluctant to say so, but there is a rumor that more than one workman had his favorite rodent—feeding him that liverwurst he did not like or maybe that biscuit his wife burned too black on one side.

Some of the students, it is reported, have been at fault, too. Sometimes their eyes have been bigger than their stomachs and they have left scraps of their lunches where hungry rats could fish them out of scrap baskets and desk drawers.

So, from far and near, a small but select tribe of rats has come to make the dim, dark recesses of the unfinished Cathedral their home.

Official heads were scratched.

Rats are unwelcome in any building—but how to make the rats know it?

About a month ago, some of the Cathedral janitors had an idea. In boxes, they brought the biggest, boldest tomcats they could find. Here, they said, these ferocious cats will pounce upon these rats like panthers!

A KITTY OF THE CLASS OF '34 . . . . . GUARDIANS OF THE CATHEDRAL

Sad to say, the tomcats couldn't see it that way. Nostalgia afflicted them. One by one, in the dead of night, they sneaked out of the beautiful Cathedral and went back whence they came to home and fireside.

Even in the face of this setback, however, the Pitt officials had a truly brilliant idea. They asked:

"If cats can be homesick, why not raise the Cathedral's cats to be at home in the Cathedral? We will bring them in as small kittens and wait for them to grow big enough to fight the rats with some hope of victory."

So that is what they have done. The Cathedral of Learning is home now for half a dozen half-grown kittens.

Twice a day their keeper, Tony Pasquarelli, feeds them saucers of milk. And he is proud of his charges. As he says:

"Just wait. These cats, they will snap up these rats. But it is not allowed for the students to feed the cats. A cat to hunt rats good should not be too full."

BROTHERS . . . WILL THEY STAY AT HOME?

HELD FOR AIDING ATTACK ON GIRL

North Side police today were holding Jack Poruben, 27, of 1448 Ruben street, as the companion of a woman said by police to have struck Mrs. Virginia Watts, 19, of 1214 Resaca place, on the head with a hammer at Sherman avenue and West Ohio street, Tuesday night.

Mrs. Watts was taken to Allegheny General Hospital. She was removed to her home last night. She and her sister, Mrs. Alberta Maloney, 21, of 1212 Resaca place, were on their way to their homes when the unidentified woman jumped from an automobile and swung the hammer at Mrs. Maloney.

Attempting to shield her sister from the blow, Mrs. Watts stepped between them and was struck on the head. The other woman and the man who drove the car, abandoned it and fled.

Poruben, arrested yesterday as the owner of the car, was released on a $1,000 bond, charged with felonious assault and battery.

LOVE BALM RAID CHARGED IN SUIT

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Clair Eugenia Smith, wealthy mother of William Van Renselaer Smith, youthful attorney, has stepped into the tangled Rogell-Smith divorce and love balm cases.

She entered the court lists by asking payment for damage alleged to have been done to furnishings in her Beverly Hills mansion last August 11 when Albert Rogell, film director, assertedly headed a raid by private detectives in quest of evidence to be used in his divorce suit against Ena Gregory Rogell.

Mrs. Smith, who is the widow of a coffee magnate, specifically names Rogell, his nephew, Sidney Rogell, and his attorney, Milton M. Cohen, Jr., as participants in the raid, according to her suit for $500 damages which was filed in Municipal Court.

The son has been named co-respondent by Rogell, and also sued by him for $150,000 in an alienation of affections action. Smith has countered with a $500,000 damage suit against Rogell, Milton M. Cohen, Jr., and Milton M. Cohen, Sr.

Helen Morgan Acquitted on Drunk Charge

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Helen Morgan, the attractive brunette torch singer, was acquitted of charges of intoxication early today by a board of arbitration of the Actors Equity Association.

The battle between the actress and Myron C. Fagan, producer, ended in a draw.

The board decided that Miss Morgan had not been intoxicated during the two opening performances of the play "Memory" at the Biltmore Theater here last May and consequently was not responsible for the flop of the play.

On the other hand the board decided that if the actress did not collect her salary it was because her husband, Maurice Maschke Jr., did not give it to her. It also decided that Fagan, the author and producer of the show, did not owe Miss Morgan for costumes which she purchased for the performance out of her own fund.

Vera Lewis, actress called as a witness, said that in regard to the charges that Miss Morgan was insubordinate, that she only heard the torch singer make suggestions as to the manner in which certain parts of the play should be played. Miss Lewis testified:

"Once she wanted to sing her song from the front of the stage but was told that such a stunt would be 'cheap.'

"Then she retorted 'if that stunt was good enough for Ziegfeld, it's good enough for Fagan.'"

DOUG AND MARY DINE TOGETHER AT PICKFORD

Fairbanks Boyish, Wife Gay; Reconciliation Hope Grows

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—New signs of a possible reconciliation between Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks appeared today at Pickfair, where they lived until their estrangement 14 months ago.

Fairbanks, back in Hollywood after more than a year abroad, has met Miss Pickford four times, twice Tuesday and twice yesterday. He accompanied Mary on several automobile drives and dined each night with her at Pickfair.

The actor, smiling and sure upon his arrival here Tuesday, gave way to boyish hesitancy yesterday as he rushed about Hollywood with the exuberance so familiar to him in the days when he and Miss Pickford ruled Hollywood as the screen's most successful couple.

MARY SMILES

A happy smile, too, warmed the soft features of Miss Pickford after two days with her estranged husband.

Those signs, plus one remark by Miss Pickford on Tuesday, were taken in Hollywood today to mean that all must be going well at Pickfair — that reconciliation lay around the corner. The actress' prophecy, that the future lay "in the lap of the gods" drew no further elaboration from her, however.

Fairbanks had even less to say. "As always."

Thus he replied to questions concerning his meetings with Miss Pickford, but he would say nothing about what transpired in the matter of marital discussions.

HINTS FOLLOW DINNER

After the dinner at Pickfair last night, reports grew out of hints dropped by Miss Pickford and Fairbanks that the couple will soon make a joint statement concerning their marital intentions. Until that time, they indicated they would have nothing to say about their private life.

The actor was at an airport yesterday when Joseph M. Schenck, head of United Artists Studio, where all of the American films of Fairbanks and Miss Pickford have been made in recent years, returned to Hollywood. The two men had been together in Europe. They exchanged warm greetings and Schenck seemed plainly elated over reports of the frequent meetings between the couple.

WOULD PLEASE HIM

He said nothing would please him more than a reconciliation between "Mary" and "Doug."

Last night Schenck, Darryl Zanuck, producer, and Miss Pickford and Fairbanks dined at Pickfair. During the course of the evening the actress suggested that Schenck and Merle Oberon, English film star to whom he is engaged, be married at the Pickford-Fairbanks estate. Schenck accepted and said he expected Miss Oberon to arrive here in about five weeks. He indicated she probably would continue her career after their marriage.

'SHEIK'S' GRAVE FLOWERLESS

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 23.—Memories of Rudolph Valentino were dim in Hollywood today — the eighth anniversary of the death of the great film sheik in New York.

Attaches of the cemetery where Valentino's body still lies in a borrowed crypt said no flowers had appeared at the mausoleum.

Annually, on Memorial Day, a heavily veiled woman places violets at the Valentino crypt. She alone seems to remember. Legend says she was one of the loves in the life of the man of many loves, but cemetery attaches said the beautiful visitor never has been identified; that she hurries to and from the shrub enclosed cemetery in an expensive limousine.

Four years ago Hollywood stars assembled as Dolores Del Rio drew a silken cord from a bronze statue of Valentino. Attendance at the unveiling ceremony in the park was enormous.

PROBE THREAT TO BEER MAN

Police today investigated a mysterious telephone call to Guiseppe DiPietro, who operates a beer garden at 4529 Irvine street, Hazelwood, demanding $3,000 under threat of "wiping out" DiPietro's family.

DiPietro told detectives he was called to the telephone last night and a man, whose voice he did not recognize, made the threat. No conditions as to where the money was to be placed were given, he said.

DiPietro claimed he knew of no enemies or how he could raise the demanded sum.

Oakland police reported there was an explosion in his place last April 4.

Woman Hurt As Toscanini Car Crashes

SALZBURG, Austria, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—It was officially announced today that Arturo Toscanini, celebrated orchestra conductor, narrowly escaped possible death three days ago when his automobile crashed into another car while passing over the Brenner Pass, connecting Austria with Italy.

Signor Toscanini

Toscanini escaped injury. An unidentified woman companion suffered a broken shoulder bone.

KILLING LINKED TO 'LITTLE EVA'

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Mrs. Sarah Hunt, second state witness to say she saw Mrs. Eva Coo and Mrs. Martha Cliff at the lonely Crumhorn Mountain home where Harry Wright is supposed to have met his death today testified she heard Mrs. Coo, on trial for her life, say to Mrs. Cliff:

"My God, I ain't done no more than you."

Mrs. Hunt, mother of six children, repeated in essence the story told by her mother, Mrs. Iva Fink, who preceded her to the stand. It was Mrs. Hunt who wrote down the number of a car she and her mother saw in the lane leading to "the haunted house" on the mountain. That car, the state contends, crushed the life out of Wright, Mrs. Coo's handy man.

Mrs. Cliff, one-time friend and boarder of Mrs. Coo at the latter's roadhouse at the foot of the mountain, may reach the stand later today, to repeat what she already has told in a confession that she drove the car which killed Wright.

RICHARD K. MELLON INSPECTING PROGRESS ON THE WORK

RUNAWAY GIRL HELD HERE

Fifteen-year-old Gladys Halversen, who disappeared from her Hayaville home yesterday, leaving behind a note saying she intended to end her life, wound up in Morals Court today.

She made the mistake of registering at the Mayfair Hotel under her own name. Detective Joseph Devlin, of the Missing Persons Bureau, explained to Magistrate J. W. McGowan.

When the clerk read in a newspaper of a blonde girl's disappearance he called police.

Gladys had only this to say:

"I want to go to my grandmother's in Massachusetts and don't want to go back home."

The girl's mother, Mrs. A. Halversen, was notified by telephone and said she would be in to get her daughter.

Jewish, Moslem Clash Again Looms

Relations between Jews and the Moslems have been dangerously strained since a series of minor clashes.

THIRD INQUIRY IN BARRY DEATH

A third investigation into the death of John W. Barry, former inspector of detectives and police, was begun today by homicide detectives, who planned to question 17 persons who viewed the body in his garage August 15 after he had been found dead.

Lieut. Franklin T. McQuaide, of the homicide squad, was renewing the probe at the request of Coroner W. J. McGregor, who asked the detectives to gather conclusive evidence of the shooting, which they reported as accidental.

Two previous homicide findings, offered to substantiate "accidental" death, were rejected by the Coroner, who declared they could not be reconciled with the contact wound revealed by a coroner's autopsy.

Those to be questioned included Mrs. Barry, former Police Supt. Edward J. Brophy, who resided with the Barrys; policemen, deputy coroners, a physician and possibly a priest, summoned to administer the last rites, according to the detectives.

The investigators will endeavor to determine in what position Barry's body was found. Deputy coroners said Barry was on his back, face up, when they reached the scene. The position, they said, was unusual for a man just shot. Those in the garage at the time will be asked if the body had been moved.

RETRIAL DENIED AS MERCHANT LIES IN GRAVE

Liens on Estate May Balk Support Claim Of Mother, 14

SOMERSET, Pa., Aug. 23.—The last will and testament of William Ramstedt, who died at 72, was being prepared today for probate in the Somerset County courts.

But the death of the aged Conemaugh Township storekeeper left behind one question which will never be answered to the satisfaction of all.

Did William Ramstedt, after he had reached his seventies, become the father of a child by a 14-year-old girl?

The courts said yes. But Ramstedt, aged and grieving over his predicament, died before the court fight was finally settled.

CONVICTED AT TRIAL

In May, 1931, Ramstedt was convicted in the Somerset courts as the father of the child. His own wife had died some 8 or 10 years earlier and he was the father of two grown children.

Only witness against Ramstedt was the 14-year-old mother. Ramstedt himself denied the charge, contending he was incapable of becoming a father.

His attorneys, Darsie B. Heckman and Clarence L. Shearer, of Somerset, appealed to Superior Court after Judge Sherman T. Boose had refused a new trial.

The arguments for a new trial were heard a few months ago in Pittsburgh. But before Judge Parker handed down an opinion, Ramstedt died. And his attorneys so notified the court.

Nevertheless Judge Parker handed down his opinion, contributing to a lively argument on the law. In it he held:

"The medical profession, so far as we can discover, has not undertaken to say the exact age at which all men become impotent. While there are accepted rules of general application, the ordinary limits of procreative powers have been exceeded from the days of Abraham and Moses . . ."

So Judge Parker turned down, after the defendant's death, his appeal for a new trial.

ESTATE ENCUMBERED

Ramstedt's small estate was encumbered with mortgages and judgments.

The girl who said he was the father of her child filed with the estate a claim totaling $300 for support of the child. The lower courts having ordered Ramstedt to pay $10 monthly.

This claim, Ramstedt's attorneys said today, will be recognized as valid, the courts having ordered it, when the will is probated.

But the young mother and her child probably never will receive a cent of Ramstedt's money, for prior claims will dispose of the few thousand dollars the old man left.

FAMED RIDERS TO TAKE JUMPS AT ROLLING ROCK

Steeplechase Course To Rival Best In Country

An army of workmen, with tractors, an ox-team, blocks and tackles and a lot of underbrush, is transforming a meadow in Rolling Rock Country Club today.

The meadow, over the hill from the clubhouse and set in a natural bowl, will become, before October 9, one of the few real brush courses for steeplechases in the country.

William A. Almy, Jr., of Boston, is supervising the construction.

The race committee of the club, under the chairmanship of Richard K. Mellon, has sent out entry blanks that are expected to bring a majority of the famous gentlemen jockeys of the nation to the course for its first steeplechase.

James E. Ryan, perhaps the foremost rider in this country; Jack Skinner, who captured first place in several Maryland Hunt Club races; Noel Laing, Carol Bassett, Bill Street and others famous in steeplechasing here and in Europe may participate in the October 9 program.

where spectators will be accommodated.

Chairman Mellon, with Herbert A. May and Almy, inspected the course yesterday.

Asked if he would ride, Chairman Mellon replied:

"No, I'll have some horses in, but I don't even know which, yet. We'll have some of the foremost steeplechase riders in the country here. Many have ridden in European races.

"We can accommodate a lot of people. There will be parking. The Greensburg Hunt show will follow this by a few days."

The Rolling Rock races will be three days before the Western Pennsylvania Hunts Race meeting at Greensburg on October 12—Columbus Day. Riders and owners can participate in both. The purses will total $3,700.

Police Records Show How Time Flies!

JONESBORO, Ark., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Chief of Police W. C. Craig has evidence that history repeats.

Twelve years ago he recovered a mule that had been stolen in Oklahoma. Mrs. Arty Smith, of Tulsa, came to Jonesboro to claim the animal.

This week Chief Craig recovered an automobile that had been stolen in Oklahoma. Mrs. Arty Smith, of Tulsa, came here to claim the vehicle.

'REVOLT' IN NRA TACKLED BY ROOSEVELT

EN ROUTE WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TO WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt hurried back to the White House today as fresh reports sprang up of a sharp controversy over the reorganization of NRA.

The Chief Executive, who paid his last respects to the late Speaker Henry T. Rainey yesterday, changed his original plans to go directly to his summer home at Hyde Park, N. Y., and returned to Washington instead in order to attend to some urgent matters. The recovery program was one of the items slated for presidential attention.

AIDES SILENT ON CLASH

In Washington, Donald R. Richberg, Mr. Roosevelt's chief industrial advisor, declined to discuss reports that he and Hugh S. Johnson, Blue Eagle chief, were in a bitter dispute over a new NRA structure. On his return to the White House, the President is expected to take command of the situation and outline definitely principles for recovery reorganization.

The drought was another matter with which the President had to wrestle. With another view of the drought's devastating effects in the otherwise rich Midwest, Mr. Roosevelt called Secretary Wallace aboard to fortify administration efforts to meet the calamity. With Secretary Wallace in the presidential private car were Marvin H. McIntyre, a secretary, and Miss Grace Tulley, private secretary, and the President's aides, Col. Edwin A. Watson and Commander H. F. Kingman.

'No Break,' Reply By Gen. Johnson

BETHANY BEACH, Del., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Hugh S. Johnson used five words today to deny emphatically there had been a split between him and Donald R. Richberg and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins over NRA policies.

The NRA administrator was informed that reports of a sharp dispute in high command of his industrial recovery campaign had been published in Washington. He replied categorically:

"1—No break.

"2—No further comment."

The Washington reports were that Richberg, chief co-ordinator of the recovery drive, and Secretary Perkins were lined up against Gen. Johnson on what some termed the issue of "one-man control" of the NRA. The Washington Post said a showdown had been asked from President Roosevelt.

Gen. Johnson's laconic statements were in contradiction of these reports.

Lieut. K. Johnson, son of Gen. Johnson, said his father had come here "for a complete rest." Gen. Johnson had taken a beach cottage, indicating he might remain some time.

U. S. MAY DROP WEIRTON SUIT

Tennessee Valley Authority, the Justice Department said the Weirton prosecution has been in charge of Attorney Frank K. Nebeker, former assistant attorney general, and that Fly only assisted him. It was Fly who presented the entire factual side of the government's case, while Nebeker discussed only points of law.

Caleb S. Layton, local member of the Weirton legal staff, said the defense is ready to go to trial September 5.

Judge John P. Nields, of the U. S. District Court, said he has not been notified of a possible abandonment of the case by the government.

NRA TEST CASE

The case is regarded as a test of the labor guarantee provisions embodied in Section 7A of the NIRA. The government filed a bill of complaint and asked for an injunction to restrain the steel company from taking any part in the balloting of its employes for collective bargaining representatives. After five days of argument last May on a motion of the government for a preliminary injunction pending final disposition of the case, Judge Nields ruled he could not enjoin the company without a final hearing because it was a labor dispute.

Both sides agreed to enter the final hearing September 5.

Ill Boy Rallied By Roosevelt Letter

International News Service.

OCEAN CITY, N. J., Aug. 23.—Physicians at the Atlantic Shores Hospital at Somers Point today were much mystified by a remarkable change for the better in the condition of Thomas Fitzgerald, 12-year-old lockjaw victim.

But it was no mystery to Thomas.

He began to improve immediately after the postman delivered a letter to him from President Roosevelt.

The President's note read as follows:

"My dear Thomas:

"I have just learned that you are ill in the hospital and send you a line to express the hope that you are much better and that you will soon be entirely recovered.

"My very best wishes to you.

"Sincerely yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

It is not known how the President learned of the lad's illness.

Civil War Veteran Dies in Somerset

SOMERSET, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—John Barndt, one of the two remaining Civil War veterans in this city, died at his home yesterday. He would have been 89 Saturday.

Barndt, a native of Somerset, enlisted in Company G, 93d Regiment of the Pennsylvania Volunteers at the age of 17. He first served as a bugler.

NRA OFFICIAL'S HOME BOMBED

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—The home of F. Nathan Wolf, secretary of the Cloak and Suit Code Authority, was bombed early today in what police interpreted as a warning to Wolf to cease NRA restrictions.

Wolf and his family were out of town, but tenants on the first floor of the double house were asleep when the bomb wrecked the porch and shattered windows. Samuel Fass, a guest of the Isadore Jacobs family, was showered with plaster, but no one was hurt.

Detective Max Black, who attributed the bombing to "NRA chiselers," said Wolf had been extremely active in prosecuting code violators.

Laws Multiplied Under 'New Deal'

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—A report of the committee on administrative law of the American Bar Association to be submitted to the association's annual convention in Milwaukee next week will say that more legislation has been passed under the "New Deal" in a single year than had been enacted since the American revolution.

Commenting on this, Walter H. Eckert, chairman of the association's publicity committee, said that the NRA alone had in a year issued 10,000 or more pages of regulations which supposedly have the effect of federal law.

LIBERTY LEAGUE WILL JUDGE NEW DEAL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—The American Liberty League began laying foundations today for a campaign across the country to recruit 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 property owners to judge the New Deal.

Avowedly non-partisan and "not anti-Roosevelt," it set out to command all possible influence in the warming debate over whether the administration is "robbing Peter to pay Paul."

At the head stand leaders in both parties popularly identified as "Conservatives." Alfred E. Smith and John W. Davis, Democrats, who lost the presidency to Hoover and Coolidge; James W. Wadsworth and Nathan L. Miller, Republican strong-men in New York.

Already there are rumblings of "Liberal" arraignment of the move that Jouett Shouse announced last night as one to combat "radicalism." It was he who described the league as "not anti-Roosevelt," but rather intended to serve as a forum and a force before Congress for those who want to guard their personal and property rights.

ROOSEVELT ADVISED

A week ago he told President Roosevelt about it, in words like these:

"The league will become a real factor in assisting toward recovery and the restoration of prosperous conditions for all our people."

That the President hardly would take exception to the announced goal is accepted. It also is certain he is aware of the political potentialities.

The league's purposes are twofold under the heading: "To defend and protect the Constitution of the United States." Data will be disseminated to teach:

1—"The necessity of respect for the rights of persons and property as fundamental to every successful form of government;" and

2—"The duty of government to encourage and protect individual and group initiative and enterprise, to foster the right to work, earn, save, and acquire prosperity, and to preserve the ownership and lawful use of property when acquired."

DU PONT ENROLLED

Shouse, who is to be elected president when the executive committee has been raised to about 18, disclosed that seven divisions will be set up for a membership drive in every state. The only other man known to be a member besides Shouse, Smith, Davis, Wadsworth and Miller is Irenee du Pont, a political independent, who supported Smith and Roosevelt.

The divisions will comprise home owners, farmers, labor, savings depositors, life insurance holders, bondholders and stockholders. Members will be in two classes, those who believe in the principles but cannot afford financial support, and those who will say it with their pocketbooks.

'PROFIT MOTIVE' IN NEW DEAL SAYS ROPER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Secretary Roper, declaring that business definitely is on the upgrade, has informed the nation that the Roosevelt administration stands for "just profits."

His statement that the government believes in the private profit motive was regarded as an answer to critics and reassurance to businessmen.

Speaking in a broadcast radio forum last night, the Commerce Department head said:

"Private enterprise is getting back upon its own feet, and more and more is exerting its initiative and is able to relieve the federal government of responsibilities which, under normal conditions, belong to business.

"The Roosevelt administration is squarely behind this principle. It believes in just profits for management and capital and an equitable return to labor for its rightful rewards in the economic processes."

Roper said the depression had convinced all thinking people that fundamental reforms are necessary if the American system of business, society and government is to be maintained. He continued:

"No thinking businessman desires to have the old order restored. He does desire and is entitled to have the new order characterized by a better control against economic cataclysms and by the freedom to exercise his initiative in planning for the future of his business in the light of an equitable profit system."

SEEK PODERJAY EXTRADITION

International News Service.

VIENNA, Aug. 23.—A formal demand for the extradition of Ivan Poderjay, dashing Jugo-Slavian cavalry officer who married the missing woman lawyer, Agnes Tufverson, in New York last December, was presented to the Austrian government today by the United States legation.

His immediate extradition was asked on a charge of perjury, based on records showing Poderjay married Miss Tufverson under false pretenses.

Poderjay was accused of perjury on the grounds he represented himself as an unmarried man, when actually at the time of his marriage to Miss Tufverson at the Little Church Around the Corner in New York, he was already the husband of a woman known as Mme. Marguerite Ferrand.

Poderjay and Mme. Ferrand have been held here for months while American and Austrian officials pursued investigations into the mysterious disappearance of the brilliant woman attorney who became his wife.

Holdup Suspects Taken After Chase

SPRINGFIELD, Col., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—After a 50-mile chase Colorado officers late yesterday captured two more suspected of having robbed the Manter, Kan., State Bank a few hours earlier.

The prisoners, who gave their names as John Pyeler, 40, and H. E. Brown, 37, were quoted by Deputy Sheriff Jared Hansen as confessing the holdup. About $650 loot taken from the bank was found in the motor car the pair abandoned.

Fall Kills Woman; Man's Neck Broken

Catherine Dole, 66, of 16 Lundon street, Brookline, died in Brookline General Hospital last night of injuries received when she fell down stairs in her home last week, according to a coroner's report.

Frank Allen, 53, of 2413 Wrights way, was in South Side Hospital with a broken neck received when he fell down a flight of stairs in his home yesterday, according to police. His condition was reported as fair.

PLAN TO UNIFY HOUSING WORK

The Housing Co-ordination Committee meeting with Housing Administrator Edward B. Lee, has completed plans to "sell" the housing project to Pittsburgh.

The committee charted a course of expansion that would bring into the group representatives of every interested agency and establish it as a liaison unit between the official housing administration and private organizations concerned in the working out of the housing act.

Lee told the meeting more than 100 applications for loans were made here in the first week of the housing act's application.

CAVANAUGH TO URGE LOAN

Use of the money is being held up by Mayor McNair's veto of a consent ordinance which would allow tolls on the Liberty Tubes.

It is expected that City Council will pass the ordinance over the Mayor's veto. The meeting tomorrow night is open to the public.

With the aid of the Federal Housing Association, Ernest Matthews, furniture store clerk of 2101 Jonquil way, is prepared to have his house painted.

Matthews said:

"It's a wonderful thing. You get the money in a lump sum and can get the work done cheaper. Then you have a year to pay it back. I'm glad I changed from a Republican to a Democrat wanting a new deal at the last election. I've wanted to paint my house for three years, and couldn't get the money."

JAP SQUATTERS FACE VIOLENCE IN ARIZONA

International News Service.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Aug. 25.—Tension diminished in the rich Salt River Valley of Arizona today when American farmers, militant over an influx of Japanese colonists from Southern California's Imperial Valley, agreed to withhold violence that had been scheduled for Saturday.

Pending prosecution by County Attorney Ben Jennings of arrested land law violators, the farmers who charge fraud in certain leases held by United States citizens, ostensibly sub-leased to Japanese in violation of the Arizona Alien Land Law, agreed to remain passive and not evict the Orientals by force.

Eight hundred of the 1,000 American farmers who had met in secret session agreed to abide by a committee's decision to defer violence, and the other 200 farmers were expected to follow a similar course although last night the 200 announced they would adhere to original plans to "run out the Japanese Saturday."

Gov. B. B. Moeur telegraphed Acting Secretary of State William Phillips he believed there would be no violence. Gov. Moeur refused to make a public statement of the situation.

Jennings filed seven new complaints charging conspiracy to violate the anti-alien land law, increasing the total cases to 18.

Sheriff J. R. McFadden reversed his position and said that he was prepared to recruit special deputies to maintain peace and safeguard lives in the trouble zone.

"Washington, D. C., seems to be slightly apprehensive."

Thus commented Attorney General Arthur T. Laprade after four telephone conversations with the State Department.

Farm leaders told Laprade 925 Japanese families had moved into the fertile valley since April.

Tokio Sees 'Politics' In Fight on Japs

TOKIO, Aug. 23.—(INS.)—Anti-Japanese agitation in Arizona is due to activities of "an unfriendly third party" and to domestic political considerations, a high official of the Japanese government told International News Service today.

This official, who is well acquainted with the situation in Arizona, expressed the belief that persons desirous of disturbing relations between Japan and the United States had stirred up the resentment of white farmers in the Salt River valley against the relatively small number of Japanese residing in the area.

These Japanese, the official pointed out, have resided there for more than a decade. They professed to regard it as very odd that resentment of their presence should flare up suddenly among Arizona farmers.

Reports that additional Japanese farmers were moving into the district were discounted by this official. He pointed out that the climate, market conditions and transportation facilities are not such as to attract Japanese truck gardeners. California, he said, was much more suited to the mode of living and the methods of labor of the Japanese.

The approaching Congressional elections were seen by the official as another factor in the situation. Political candidates, he declared, were endeavoring to turn the anti-Japanese feeling that has been stirred up to their advantage.

"The arrests were made without documents, accompanied by searches of the apartments and offices of Soviet employes of the Chinese Eastern Railway, which have not been explained."

A message to Tass, official Soviet News Agency, from Khabarovsk, Siberia, said Japanese gendarmes arrested 16 more Soviet citizens August 22 along the C. E. R.

Each of the parties on the Atlantic City trip and New York City tours is accompanied by representatives of the Sun-Telegraph and the program of entertainment and sight-seeing has been arranged for in advance. These Sun-Telegraph guests will be "on the go" until tomorrow night, when they return to Pittsburgh, arriving here early Saturday.

ESKIMO SAVES BRITISH FLIER

ANGMAGSALIK, Greenland, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—John Grierson is ready today to fly Greenland's ice cap on his way to America, thanks to a half-breed Eskimo minister, who found him lost and shivering in a desolate fjord.

The British aviator, who has spent a month flying the Atlantic by stages, became lost on the bleak eastern coast of Greenland Tuesday. Unaware that he was near this little settlement, the flier sent out an SOS and landed.

He was found the next morning by the minister, the Rev. Rosing. Later he flew to Angmagsalik.

Grierson said he had no idea of his position and had resigned himself to a wait of a week for rescuers. The flier had only pemmican to eat, but had a 10-day suply of that. He spent a chilly night in his plane, getting little sleep.

2 QUINTUPLETS QUIT INCUBATOR

CALLANDER, Ontario, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Two of the 86-day-old Dionne quintuplets, Yvonne and Annette, have moved out of their incubators to new metal beds. These beds, along with three similar ones for their sisters, will be taken to the Dafoe Hospital when the building is completed.

Foundation, walls and roof of the structure were finished yesterday, and 13 men rushed work on the remainder of the building. It was hoped to have the hospital completed before the chilly fall weather starts.

Dr. A. R. Dafoe, Callander physician, who has supervised care of the five little sisters since their birth, explained why he had taken the babies from their incubators. He said:

"They need more fresh air now."

Both Yvonne and Annette, the heaviest babies, are very active these days, the doctor said, and the new beds will allow the restless youngsters more room to do their stretching and rolling.

CLERIC WRITES HOW HE FLED BANDIT ARMY

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 23—(AP)—Fifty one days as a prisoner of Chinese bandits and details of six attempted escapes from various bandit camps—are described in a missionary's letter to his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Smith, of Bedford Station, near Washington, received the letter yesterday from their son, the Rev. Howard A. Smith, representing the Christian Missionary Alliance in the Orient.

With his wife and small daughter, the Rev. Smith was in the missionary compound at Pengchi-Chuna, at the time it was raided by Ho Lung, notorious Communistic leader of Szechwan Province.

PLEA SPARES WIFE

After sacking the compound, the bandits carried off the minister. He succeeded in persuading them to permit Mrs. Smith and the child to go free. They were reunited several weeks ago at Foochow.

The Rev. Smith, in his letter, says he was captured by "spirit soldiers" three times after escaping Ho Lung's camp. The "spirit soldiers", roam the countryside, hi-jacking the loot of rival gangs. On each of the three occasions, the Rev. Smith was returned to Ho Lung in exchange for various "favors."

Twice more, the Rev. Smith escaped and was returned to Ho Lung. On the sixth occasion, he recounts, he "talked" his way to freedom. With a servant who escaped with him, the missionary subsisted on five raw ears, two bowls of peas and four wheat cakes until they reached safety.

ESCAPE BY LEAP

They fled from the bandit camp at night, darkness aiding them in escaping an alarm. Then they traveled only at night, hiding and sleeping in fields during the day.

He said a strange gang of "spirit soldiers" attacked their farmhouse hideout after their sixth escape. As the soldiers ransacked the house, shouting "kill, kill," the Rev. Smith and his servant leaped from a second floor window, crawling on their hands and knees through a corn field to safety.

Criticism of capital and labor for the use of "sheer force" in industrial disputes.

Opposition of birth control and sterilization measures now pending in the legislatures of many states.

Recommendation that Catholic schools be allowed to share in public relief funds.

PARENTS SLEW BROTHER, SAYS BOY 'RED'

International News Service.

MOSCOW, Aug. 25.—Soviet Russia's drama of conflict, the new and the old, was given a Macabre almost unbelievable twist when a 14-year-old lad accused his parents of murdering his younger brother because the brother had denounced them as "kulaks" and thieves of state property.

Young Vanya Divkin's story to police brought to an amazing climax a murder mystery and tragedy of sons against parents which began in the Leningrad region early in April.

Vanya's mother, Anna, and his father, Peter, were jailed charged with the murder of their son and Vanya's brother, Mischa, 11.

DRILLED BY SOVIETS

Like Vanya, Mischa was a stalwart member of the "young pioneers," the organization which takes the Soviet's youngsters and drills and teaches them to grow up to be good Communists.

Typical young Communists in the making, Mischa and Vanya were active in the civil affairs of their village, Fadeevka. Their parents had been "kulaks," land-owning farmers under czardom. Under a red Moscow they became members of a Soviet collective farm.

Mischa learned that grain and other property was being stolen from the Fadeevka collective farm. He wrote a letter to the newspapers. In it he denounced the thieves as "kulaks" and named his father and mother among them.

To the Communist-drilled Mischa, the word "kulak" was one of contempt. The Communist-taught Mischa placed the welfare of the state above his parents.

PARENTS ARRESTED

Anna and Peter were arrested on their son's charges. They were tried, but not convicted.

Last April, Mischa's body was found in the fields. Local and regional police could uncover nothing that pointed to his murderers.

But finally Vanya came to them. The boy said that while Mischa slept, his father strangled him and then dumped the body where it was found. The father said he had stopped Mischa's "tattling," and warned Vanya to keep silent.

Since April, Vanya said, he had kept his secret because his father and mother and other relatives threatened him with the same fate if he told. Now Vanya probably will be the principal witness against his parents.

GARY AND SANDRA PARTED FOR MONTH

By HARRISON CARROLL

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 25.—A month's separation looms for Gary Cooper and his bride, Sandra Shaw. As a product of the "Love of a Negro Lately" groups, the lanky star will have to camp on the Khyber Pass location where women are forbidden because of the large number of natives used in the production.

Cooper is the only married man among the principals. He'll live in the tent colony which is to house 200 white men and 300 East Indians of assorted provinces and castes.

Studio authorities hope to avoid disorder, but are prepared to meet it. Armed guards will patrol the camp in case of trouble between the Punjabis, Mohammedans, Hindus, Sikhs, Afridi and other natives. Ill feeling already has cropped up but so far has not assumed a serious nature.

There will be only 12 women in the camp and these a troupe of Nautch dancers hired for the picture. Katherine De Mille will be the only white actress to work in the scenes, and she is to motor back to Hollywood each night.

GARY COOPER

. . . . no women where he's going . . . .

SANDRA SHAW

. . . she's staying home . . .

The Khyber Pass set and its camp of 85 tents is the biggest movie location in several years. Finding its ranch insufficient, Paramount rented 500 acres for the duration of the film.

Only one of the principals to live in style will be Sir Guy Standing, who'll be quartered in his own automobile trailer. Studio authorities have promised Cooper as many week-end leaves as possible to see his wife.

COLLEGE PROFS. 'YES MEN,' HIS TESTS SHOW

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—"Muddle headed."

Dr. F. Bruce Raup, of Teachers College, Columbia University, so characterized the average college professor today. What is more, he produced statistics which showed:

The average college professor can't think clearly. He is unable to analyze problems thoroughly and logically.

He is a "yes man."

He doesn't know anything about political, social and economic problems which do not bear a direct relation to the subject he teaches.

He cares only less.

Dr. Raup based these statements on replies to a questionnaire by more than 2,000 educators throughout the country. In answering the questionnaire, he declared, the professors exhibited "astounding inconsistency." He added:

"More than half the teachers contradicted themselves at least once in every three replies."

Dr. Raup noted a "low degree of sales resistance" among the educators. If a question was stated positively, the professors were inclined to answer it in the affirmative. They just couldn't help saying "yes."

Two Ask Attorney In Showboat Suit

Twow former employes of the Goldenrod Showboat, William Bushy and Maxie Knitter, today appealed to Federal Judge R. M. Gibson for an attorney to enter suit against the owners of the boat for back wages, alleged due, on the ground they were unable to pay court costs.

The court named U. S. Commissioner Roger Knox. Bushy claims $57 and Knitter $225.

Squirrel Insists On Hunting Trouble

GREENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 25.—Greensburg City Council is considering the importation of a safe squirrel to make with the Boiling Springs' amateur squirrel which is constantly deserting its habitat in St. Clair Public Park and is causing police and the Safety Department no end of embarrassment.

Nine squirrels have been added to the natural surroundings in the park and eight of them have already mated. A week ago the nine male squirrels, apparently on the hunt for a mate, invaded the downtown business district and tied up traffic while a city electrician finally rounded it up atop a pole. This week the "bachelor" again wandered off and the performance of capturing him was repeated.

ELEVATOR DROP PERILS 10

Ten persons, four of them women, narrowly escaped injury here today when an elevator fell in Moose Temple, 616 Penn avenue, where they were attending a gathering of Spanish-American War veterans.

One of the passengers, William Zepenbair, 51, of New York, was detained at Allegheny General Hospital for observation.

The elevator "slipped" after leaving the third floor, according to Richard Haup, 628 Arch street, the operator. He said it struck the supports below the first floor and bounced back several feet, jarring the passengers.

HUNT 'SEERESS' IN GYPSY BAND

Belief that one of four gypsy women under arrest in Rochester, N. Y., was the one who obtained $110, a wrist watch, dresses and other articles from Glassport residents, was expressed by Police Chief Dominic George, of Glassport.

During the firemen's carnival last week the woman, Madame Zarro, 37, who claimed to be a mind reader and fortune teller, went around the borough and accepted gifts from residents, police said. She was to concentrate on them for a few hours, then return them to the persons from whom she got them and tell that person's fortune, but she failed to return, according to Chief George.

Chief George learned of the arrest of the four women in Rochester through a police teletype message stating that the four women were arrested on vagrancy charges after they were alleged to have attempted to obtain $5,000 from an aged man to cure his illness. Chief George communicated with Rochester police, requesting pictures of the women to ascertain if Madame Zarro is one of them, he said.

BRIDGE RAILING COST $26,000 OVER LOW BID

The County Commissioners today were looking over an audit report on the purchase of hand railing for bridges which has revealed that former county officials at one time urged a low bidder seeking to oust the county trying to withdraw his bid so that the contract might be given to another firm.

This was done with the result that more than $26,000 was spent unnecessarily for the installation of the hand railing on the McKees Rocks Bridge.

The report was submitted to the Commissioners yesterday by Main & Co. It covers the awarding of 15 contracts for railing on three bridges from December, 1934, to May, 1935.

The report showed that the Independent Bridge Company of McKees Rocks and the Columbia Contracting Company both bid for furnishing railing for the bridge, the Columbia company being low. Officials of the Columbia company informed the auditors that they withdrew only after county officials told them they had no chance to get the contract, being an out-of-the-city firm. The contract was then given to the Independent Bridge Company.

The report further shows that it cost the county $198,217.63 to give the contract to the Independent Bridge Company, when it would have cost only $171,791.84 had the contract gone to the original low bidder.

This occurred at the time that the late Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong had set his mind on using the Hunter railing, a patented railing devised by Percy E. Hunter, president of the Independent Bridge Company. In a letter to Director Norman F. Brown of the Public Works Department, he is said to have declared this was the railing to be used.

Brown is then said to have notified the Columbia Contracting Company they were out of the running. Investigation revealed the Columbia company to be the low bidder. It was then that Director Brown is said to have hinted to representatives of the Columbia company that they might as well withdraw because they had no chance to get the contract.

The report further revealed that because the county officials specified the Hunter type of bridge railing in three of the 15 contracts, the taxpayers had to pay 7.03 cents a pound more than that specified in the other 12 contracts. Auditors stated the average cost of the Hunter type of railing was 17.5 cents per pound and the other hand railing would average but 10.77 cents per pound.

In contracts for railing for Ohio River boulevard bridges, bids were taken for 475,000 pounds of Hunter railing and a similar quantity of other railing. The contracts were to be awarded to the lowest bidder for the total of both kinds of railing, which would permit the county to choose either type of railing. Booth & Flinn Co. was the low bidder.

After the bids had been opened it was decided to eliminate all railing except the Hunter type and 735,870 pounds of this railing was used at a total cost of $122,890.29.

While no "charges" are made the auditors point out that by keeping down the bid for the other type of railing a contractor might be the low bidder and then when awarded a contract to supply the entire amount in Hunter railing, his contract might be the highest.

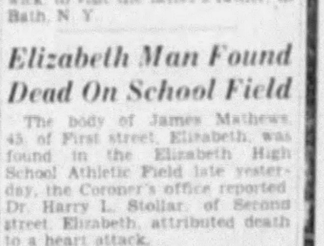
The "trick specification" in bidding has long been a means of awarding contracts to other than the lowest bidder. An example of how this is done follows:

A department wants a quantity of picks and shovels. Bids are asked for all manner of tools, the lowest total to be given the contract. A bidder knowing exactly what the county wanted, would list hatchets and saws and other tools at a remarkably low figure, keeping the picks and shovels high, but his total would be the lowest.

Friendly Pickets Too Much for Ritzy Tailor

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—AP.—A Washington tailor shop that has indicated distaste for high-pressure and ruthless methods in selling it's goods, used a novel method of fighting a picket who was walking in front of his shop wearing a sandwich-board proclaiming the firm "unfair" to union labor. Now another picket, and in repeated another union, has joined him. But the newspapers say declares the employer "is not unfair" to labor.

The proprietor asked the District Supreme Court to issue them both off the sidewalk, but the judge declined.



BOY, 14, MISSING FROM HOME

The Missing Persons Bureau today was searching for Axel Olson, 14, of 527 Cora street. He is 5 feet 8 inches tall, has reddish brown hair, blue eyes, and a scar on his nose, and was wearing a pair of old blue overalls when last seen.

The boy left home about 10 a. m. Saturday, to play, and was last seen in New Alexandria at 11 p. m.

The boy's parents believe he went to New York with a friend, James Borthwick, to visit the latter's father, in Bath, N. Y.

WIFE BATTLES TO SAVE MAN FROM NOOSE

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Lee Deloris Murphy who police said, talking for brides-to-be to make her laugh when she became fatally heated in a Long Beach apartment eight years ago will die for her murder here tomorrow unless his present wife, whom he married in Pittsburgh, gains a reprieve for him.

Murphy was moved to the death cell, and prison authorities said they were pushing Acting Gov. Frank F. Merriam did not intend to interfere with the scheduled hanging.

Murphy was arrested in Pittsburgh seven years after the slaying of his bride of a week, Mrs. Cornelia Bottles Murphy, daughter of the late Mrs. Charlotte Bottles, of Fresno, Cal.

Long Beach police testified that Mrs. Murphy told them in a dying statement that her husband beat her with a strap beside the bath of November 30, 1926, broke her jaw, kicked her in the abdomen and then tickled the soles of her feet to make her laugh. She died December 15.

Murphy's cell mate before he was moved to the death cell was David A. Lamson, convicted of slaying his wife, Alene Thorpe Lamson, in their Stanford University campus home last year.

Treasury Straddles On Silver and Inflation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The inflation whoopee has started again. It is being encouraged partly unwittingly in the face that every responsible leader in Washington and New York has feared that a reading government action recently predicted it will the record to 50 or more people. He did not say how much or when.

The method he chose to spread the word has caused many people to doubt the value of the prediction. When anyone lets so many people in on such a highly speculative secret, it usually is not a very good secret.

The truth seems to be that the administration is trying to hint two different times on the money plans at the same time. That is what was done on silver. The reflationary undertone, but a thoroughly firm money method. The inflationary hints are supposed to drive stagnant money out of hoarding before prices go higher. The sound money melody is designed to soothe the ears of government bondholders.

It takes a master political pianist to attempt those two themes at the same time.

METHOD

More interesting than that, however, is the fact that certain money experts have worked out a specific plan whereby the government could undertake a convincing moderate money inflation. They base it on what already has been done with gold and silver.

It is highly desirable in undertaking inflation for the government to seize all gold and silver. Such action keeps these precious metals in the country and yet out of public circulation in competition with paper money. That has been done. Another desirable step is to devalue gold and get a big reserve profit in the Treasury. That has been done.

The next step would be to devalue the silver dollar commensurately with gold, thus accumulating a silver reserve profit in the Treasury.

By thus cutting the content of the silver dollar, the Treasury could also hasten the day on which silver would be established at the government 23 per cent price with gold. It would have to do very little additional silver to reach the new goal. The Treasury would also then have a theoretical silver as well as gold profit against which it could issue $7½ to $8 billions of new currency. That would be a limited monetary inflation and a fairly sound one because the new money would be backed by gold and silver although at a depreciated value.

Currency Decision Will Wait Fall Elections

WORKINGS

It may sound complicated but it is a relatively simple monkeywrenching trick. The government merely increases the price of its gold and silver monetary reserves arbitrarily and uses the profit to issue currency.

How much good it would do is a matter for debate.

The new currency issue probably would be used to pay off the public debt. That would be the logical thing to do. In that case, the money would only replace existing bonds in banks and insurance companies now already overloaded with money. However, it might create an inflationary psychology and thus stimulate buying.

HYDE PARK

Mr. Roosevelt has a secret administrative use for his home at Hyde Park. His associates know he is not going there merely for a month's vacation.

The inside on that is that in the White House he lives like Gen. Johnson in a goldfish bowl. If important people are called in to see him, everyone knows about it immediately.

Hyde Park is a retreat where President Roosevelt can run visitors in and out without anyone being the wiser.

GRID STARFINED IN WILD RIDE

Paris Monahan, 24 Ohio State University football opponent, was fined $40 and costs for the wild automobile ride he led a band over sand by police to Beaver taken through the North Boroughs last Friday.

Monahan, who lives at 1140 Mallance street, was charged with reckless driving speeding, driving without a license and disorderly conduct. He was fined $10 on each charge by Judge of the Peace D. E. Fleming of Aspinwall last night. Thomas P. Murphy of 4041 Leslie street, owner of the automobile, charged with disorderly conduct, was fined $10 and costs.

The wild auto chase began in Avalon and ended when the machine struck a hydrant on Highland and Church avenues, Ben Avon, according to police.

2 CUBAN AR MY OFFICERS FACE FIRING SQUAD

HAVANA, Aug. 23.—(AP)—Two high ranking Cuban Army officers were sentenced to prison by court martial today for participation in a revolutionary plot against Col. Fulgencio Batista, commander-in-chief of the Army.

Maj. Angel Echevarria and Capt. Augustin Erice, commanding of the Army Signal Corps, were convicted of participation in the plot in an early morning session at Camp Columbia, outside Havana.

The revolt was created in Pinar Del Rio Province before it could get started. It was planned for September 4, the anniversary of the rebellion by which Batista, a former sergeant, established himself at the head of the Army.

Reports that eight enlisted men were shot to death in Pinar Del Rio Province when the revolt was squashed were denied officially, but several newspapers said 20 were dead.

The whirlwind developments in the conspiracy disclosed, thwarted, the suspects arrested and tried within the space of 24 hours.

Hundreds of soldiers, sitting in the picturesque open-air Army Theater at Camp Columbia, heard witness after witness testify. Lieut. Col. Mario Hernandez, youthful military commander of Pinar Del Rio, and Maj. Gen. Echevarria led the plot to overthrow Batista and kill him if necessary.

Half a dozen high-ranking officers testified Hernandez and Echevarria tried to enlist their support in the movement to overthrow Batista and that Capt. Erice acted as messenger in "passing the word along."

Erice's wife last night pleaded tearfully with Batista's aides, for leniency for her husband, saying he did not know what he was doing recently because he had been drinking heavily. Havana remained quiet.

BLAST BURNS 3 OF RADIO STAFF

CINCINNATI, Aug. 23.—(AP)—Three radio entertainers were burned, and one of them is in a hospital, the result of an explosion of a transformer beneath the pavement at Fifth and Walnut streets, one of the city's principal downtown intersections, last night.

They are:

Norman Gottschalk, 28, confined to a hospital with burns to his hands, legs and face; Jean Jostyn, 32, and his wife, Ruth, 25, both of whom were treated at the hospital for lesser burns to face, legs and body.

The three were walking along Fifth street when, without warning, sheets of flame roared from a grill-work above the electrical installation. The blast was due to a short circuit, firemen indicated.

Hundreds of persons were attracted to the scene. The streets were crowded at the time with theater-goers and late diners.

The three victims are members of the dramatic staff of Station WLW.

PAROLE DENIED TO 'TRAVELER'

R. Robert Hunter, graduate of Colgate and Cornell law schools and world traveler, was remanded to the Western Penitentiary by Judge James H. Gray, who refused to grant freedom on a habeas corpus action.

Hunter, who was sentenced from four to eight years from Chester County on a false pretense charge, claims he should be paroled, but parole and pardon boards both refused on the ground that he had violated previous paroles. Hunter must now serve out his sentence and will not be released until December 17, 1935.

Hunter, prior to getting into difficulties in Chester County, was permitted to go to France, but failed to report as required, according to police.

Data was produced before the court to show that if Hunter goes back to France he will be rearrested there.

Jack Dempsey May Attend Ox Roast

Reviving an ancient custom of ox roasting, the Hipper Dipper Club has announced it will hold a picnic and outing on September 6 at the Daniels farm. Harry Dippel, chairman of the event, expects Jack Dempsey and his manager, Max Waxman, will be among the guests. Ten large turtles will be used in making turtle soup that will be served all day.

Police said the vehicle was driven by James Bongiosini, 18.

FLORENCE RICE LOSES 'BREAK'

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 23.—(AP)—Arthritis has dealt harshly with Florence Rice, daughter of Grantland Rice, sports writer.

Given her first "break" in movies when she was assigned to an important role in the current production "The Captain Hates the Sea," Miss Rice was forced against her will to become a hospital patient two weeks ago when she suffered an attack of arthritis.

For two weeks the studio has "shot around her."

Now her physician announces she must remain in the hospital at least another three weeks. Finding it impossible to further delay production of scenes in which Miss Rice appeared, the studio assigned Helen Vinson to the role.

Police Seek Two Boys Chased From Store

Two youths, foiled in their attempt to enter the W. T. Grant store, 510 Market street, last night, were sought by police today.

A police squad from Central Police Station rushed to the store after receiving a report that the pair was on the roof of the building, police reported. Police hurried to the roof and found that the youths had escaped.

TRUEX, LOU HOLTZ :-: Russ Columbo, June Knight :-: ON AIR TONIGHT

Stars Stud Current Bills

Ever wondrous is that energetic showman, Rudy Vallee, who through months upon months of continuous broadcasting has never failed his followers.

Now, as much as ever, you always can count on a good show when you twirl the dial to his program on a Thursday night between 9 and 9, which is something of an achievement in radio. Few live as long or so consistently come through with the goods, on the aerial lanes as the saxophonist-emcee, who waded through showers of grapefruit and over-ripe tomatoes and such to win—and hold—one of the highest spots in radiodom.

All of which is by way of getting around to his current bill, which brings to the WCAE waves tonight two of Broadway's prime funny men, Ernest Truex and Lou Holtz, at the head of a highly versatile cast—a cast with more or less of a familiar tinge, inasmuch as the former is aided and abetted in his contribution by his wife and son, Phillip.

Truex, whose stage successes on Broadway have catapulted him to high favor among the mazda stem theatergoers, will coin the comedy of Casper Milquetoast, the "timid soul," for the Vallee tuners-in, and Holtz will proffer his characteristic, glib humor. Others booked are Cross and Dunn, song and patter specialists, and Lillian Carmen, bluesist, of Billy Rose's Casino de Paree.

PAUL CELEBRATES

Also studding the waves tonight are Russ Columbo and June Knight, billed in the "Forty-five Minutes in Hollywood" guest spot—WJAS at 10. Singing in the manner which won them fame, they'll go on the air from Los Angeles, with the remainder of the program, a preview of Lee Tracy's latest, originating in New York. . . .

Meanwhile, on the competitive NBC-red web, Paul Whiteman will be celebrating the first anniversary of his cheese shows, with Helen Jepson, Peggy Healy, Ramona, Roy Bargy, Johnny Mercer, Bob Lawrence, Johnny Hauser, Jack Teagarden and the King's Men all taking their turns at the mike.

If you've a weakness for "Birth of the Blues," by the way, the maestro plots wafting of an original arrangement.

Things political take their place in the radio picture with an attack on current national problems by Col. Theodore Roosevelt, over WCAE at 4:30, and an address on "This Double Deal" by Thomas D. Schall, blind Senator of Minnesota, over WJAS at 10:45.

Roosevelt's address, a feature of the state meeting of Republicans of Rhode Island at Providence, is entitled "The AAA and the NRA."

"The Carlos," new song written for Hollywood's latest dance sensation, will highlight the Show Boat wafting at 9. . . .

The historically romantic days of the Alaskan gold rush suggest tonight's "Bar X Days and Nights" play. . . .

A woman gambler, who made and lost numerous fortunes within a quarter of a century, is the central character of the KDKA "Death Valley Days" drama. . . .

The Westminster Choir, which leaves Saturday for an extensive series of European concerts, says a musical farewell via KDKA at 9:30. . . .

Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, makes his first public address since taking office last November over both the NBC-red and CBS webs Tuesday night. . . .

From the WCAE studios comes another of radio's not-so-frequent "show-goes-on" stories. Despite the fact that her tiny son was scheduled to go on the operating table within half an hour, Polly, of Polly's Party Line, went through her script without a tremor the other day. And when she arrived at the hospital the operation was already under way.

"Sonny," we're glad to report, is getting along fine.

Sailing the Ether Waves

Funnyman Ernest and Mrs. Truex (left) and June Knight, all booked on tonight's aerial schedule. Mrs. Truex will assist hubby on the Vallee Hour. Miss Knight co-stars with Russ Columbo in "Forty-five Minutes In Hollywood."

County Fair Air Topic

The Allegheny County Fair, to be held at South Park from August 28 to September 3, inclusive, will be discussed by Col. C. C. McGovern, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, over WCAE at 6:35 tonight.

Col. McGovern will be interviewed by the Sun-Telegraph Aircaster.

Local Highlights On WJAS

Herman Middleman's Band is heard for the first time on WJAS tonight with a half-hour program, starting at 12.

Other dance features—Eddie Peyton's Frivolities at 11:30 and Freddie Herrick at 6:15.

Gregorio Scalzo plays both old and new tunes during his 6:45 program.

AERIAL GRID SCHEDULE FOCUSES HERE

18 Games Booked By Columbia Net In Fall Series

By AIRCASTER

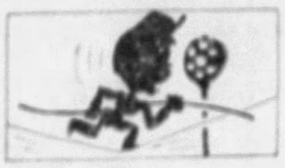
Pittsburgh, long eminent in the radio scheme of football broadcasting, shatters its fetters this year to take an important place in the spotlight of gridiron warfare.

Three of the most outstanding local battles of the season, it has been decided, will go on the coast-to-coast lines through the Columbia facilities with WJAS feeding in the net from Forbes Field and Pitt Stadium.

Of 18 games to be encompassed in CBS between September 22 and November 24, the three are, respectively, the Duquesne-West Virginia meet at Forbes Field, September 28; Pitt-W. & J., at Pitt Stadium, September 29, and Pitt-Southern California, at the Stadium, October 13. Which gives the Steel City exactly 16 2-3 per cent of the Columbia schedule.

Choice of the Duke-W. Va. opener may be laid, to an extent, to Mr. Ted Husing, who will do all three play-by-play accounts. Or it may not. At any rate, the fact remains that the popular sports broadcaster was—well, simply overwhelmed, mr. deah—by the gallant fight put up by West Virginia, and the Duke's tough battle for victory, last year.

In town to report the Pitt-W. & J. game, Husing whiled away his time by attending the former on the previous night—and so it goes on the national lanes this year.



WHAT NEXT?

Evidently the stunt man in the radio temples—those lads who are supposed to conceive ways and means of thrilling an admittedly jaded audience—are in a state of acute competition. No sooner does one web proclaim Cowell in readiness to present some outlandish divertissement than the other cometers with a new one. Let Joe Cook bring a tight wire into the studio for his broadcast, and you'll hear of Cliff Edwards leading New York cops a merry chase, while the audience renders mild applause.

Last week there came a fanfare from NBC about its plan to broadcast from mountain peaks scattered over the earth. Yesterday CBS sallied forth with an attraction, set to begin September 1, which is something of a novelty.

It's to be called "Dancing Around the World," and will be a half-hour series. During each broadcast, orchestras, permitted one number each, will be picked up from London, Paris, Vienna, Rome, Madrid, Hawaii, Panama, Buenos Aires and even the Antarctic.

No matter what terpsichore you like or despise, you'd get it all in this rambie.

Maestro Laments American Music: 'Hash,' He Says

MUSIC 'HASH'

Mr. Johnny Green the maestro, will present, via WJAS tonight, two musical premieres. "Tia Juana" a hot rhythm number, and "Hilly Billy Willy," a comedy opus. They are by Raymond Scott and Herman Hupfeld, respectively, which names suggested a question.

"What," I asked the young latter, "don't you put on a full program of American music?" And his reply was startling.

"You must be joking. There is no such thing as American music. What we call American music is hash swept out of the back doors of our foreign neighbors. We have jazz, yes, but it is only music when somebody like Goofs builds it up. I like jazz, but to me it is only a means of expression, hardly to be represented as the musical meter of a great nation. There is not really literate music we can call American. I do not mean to disparage Stephen Foster, or men of his school, but those ballads are the American prototypes of Germany's 'Ach du Lieber,' and England's 'Tipperary,' or France's 'Sur le Pont d'Avignon.' Purveyors of American music are responsible. They are content to sit back and be fooled by 'nothing put otherhash.'"

WHAT can a woman do to be charming?

It isn't a matter of a Grecian profile or gowns with a Paris label. It isn't a matter of age or money. It is often a matter of health.

Health means a clear skin . . . sparkling eyes . . . bubbling vitality . . . steady nerves and a dependable disposition. Radiant health is the foundation of beauty and charm. The woman who is healthy and friendly and interested in the world about her cannot fail to be attractive to others.

If you are not as well as you want to be, try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Remember that 98 out of 100 women say, "It helps me!"

"I was a disagreeable old spit-cat!"
—says Mrs. Davidson

"I was so nervous I wanted to scream. Your Tablets helped me wonderfully. My husband remarked last night of the difference he sees in me. I am not that grouchy, disagreeable old spit cat I was three weeks ago. I am a cheerful, joking young girl again."—Mrs. Clarence R. Davidson, 1311 Milburn Blvd., Mishawaka, Indiana.

"All the fun was gone out of life—"

"All the fun was gone out of life. I was very nervous and had terrible backaches. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a great medicine for a woman at any time of life but especially at the Change and before motherhood. My daughter Lucille feels 100% better since she took it. It helped my daughter-in-law, too."—Mrs. S. Matushek, 10007 Edbrooke Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

If periodic pain is dragging you down, ask your druggist for Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets. Mrs. Marion Sidor, 5436 Grace Street, Chicago, Illinois, says: "I had severe pains and terrible headaches periodically. My husband saw your Tablets advertised and bought me a bottle. They helped me wonderfully—stopped all the pain."

It's old fashioned to suffer. Silly, too, when so many stores sell Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets. They bring welcome relief from cramping pains, "blue" spells, periodic backache and headache and similar discomforts which undermine a woman's charm.

SPANIEL KILLS BIG COUGAR

(International News Service.)

POWELL RIVER, B. C., Aug. 23.—Frank McQuarrie's pet spaniel is not a large dog, but it has enough courage and daring to make up for the lack of poundage.

The small pet recently tangled with a full-grown cougar and came out alive. The cougar didn't.

The lop-sided battle took place in Paradise Valley and was witnessed by two men who were attracted to the scene by the snarling of the cougar. They were astonished to see the spaniel with a death grip on the cougar's throat.

The cat tried in vain to hurl the dog from its hold, but the spaniel's teeth found the jugular vein and ended the struggle.

The dog escaped serious injury.

SHOP GIRLS PUZZLE HER

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP)—Why American shop girls should save money to take a trip to Europe puzzles Sophie Vost, who is here from Holland to study them, she said.

"It looks very strange to see working girls dressed like ladies, to go with them to restaurants and see them sit at tables and be waited on like ladies.

"It is not so in my country. Anyone seeing us going to work know that we are working girls.

"We carry our lunch and we take our coffee standing because it is cheaper that way. We do not have the same feeling of equality of being as good as wealthy people as working girls here seem to have. And I'm sure we don't have nearly so much fun."

Miss Vost, head designer of lingerie and children's clothes for the largest shop in Amsterdam, was the Dutch delegate to the Bryn Mawr College Summer School for Workers in Industry.

N. Y. FORECASTS PERMANENT U. S. RELIEF

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Millions of dollars in new municipal taxes or 400,000 families will suffer says Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia.

But—the Mayor is "reliably informed" of this—"most cities are planning their relief so the basis that by April 1 a system of unemployment insurance or some kind of permanent aid will have been provided by the federal government."

La Guardia in an address last night challenged New York to maintain its record that "not one man, woman or child has been permitted to go hungry or to go without shelter." To do this, he said, New York must enact a gross receipts tax of ½ of 1 per cent.

The plan calls for business industry and the professions to pay on all receipts over $5,000. City leaders hope to raise $35,000,000 a year this way, with another $12,000,000 to come from municipal lotteries.

Relief costs national, state and city governments $200,000,000 a year in New York, said the Mayor. Last month's combined bill was $17,750,000 and the city has "not a cent" for September.

PINCHOT SILENT ON RELIEF

HARRISBURG, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Pennsylvania is still in the dark today on Gov. Pinchot's plans for a final appeal to Washington for continued federal aid for the state's unemployed.

The Executive, expected at the Capitol the first of the week, withdrew instead into the silence of his Milford home and yesterday summoned advisors and clerks there.

The shift was due, it was explained, to the fact that the Governor will probably go to Washington direct from Milford.

Meanwhile, the state pondered rumors: That Pinchot will lay before the federal government a draft of the call he says he will issue for a special general assembly session if relief money is not forthcoming; that recent "developments" have made a special session unnecessary.

POLITICS :: By Mark Shields

Attorney Charles J. Margiotti, defeated as a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in the May primary, will adopt one of three courses in the November campaign.

He will either run as an independent nominee for the Democratic ticket, or remain in a quiescent stage throughout the autumnal battle.

This is a speculative interpretation of a statement made yesterday by Mr. Margiotti upon his return from Chicago. He said:

"You may be sure that I will take whatever course is best designed to secure adoption of those principles I advocated in the primary campaign, no matter where that course may lead."

Mark Shields

Beyond that, Mr. Margiotti would not go, but from other sources it was learned that he probably would make no declaration until after he had seen the Republican platform. That almost certainly eliminated the first point of conjecture. The platform will not be adopted until September 6 at the earliest, one day after the last date on which a candidate can file an independent nomination.

That brings Mr. Margiotti down to the alternative of declaring for the Democrats or remaining quiet, the choice being limited because of the attitude he adopted in the primary. In that contest he was unequivocal in his condemnation of three prominent Republicans, Joseph R. Grundy, Gen. W. W. Atterbury and W. L. Mellon, denoted as the representative of the Mellon political group in this end of the state.

Little Hope for Liberal Platform

He ascribed to their influence defeat of legislation touching on social and economic questions which he was championing. Since the primary the sway of at least two of these gentlemen, former Senator Grundy and Gen. Atterbury, has grown rather than diminished as they have seized control of the Republican State Committee.

While Mr. Margiotti would not discuss the situation at this time for publication, he is reported to have little faith that, even should the party adopt a liberal platform at its meeting in Pittsburgh next month, that the planks could be considered under the state law. Even should Attorney General Schnader, the Republican gubernatorial nominee, be elected and exert all his influence for liberal legislation, there are friends of Margiotti who believe such efforts would be nullified by the legislative influence the triumvirate of leaders could produce, especially in the Senate.

It is being revealed by Mr. Margiotti and some of his friends that Gov. Pinchot, despite a trend toward liberalism, was more often than not arrayed in the Senate.

So far there has been no conference in the Margiotti group to determine the general attitude of those who were for the Pittsburgh attorney in the primary. That may take place tonight, but even then there will be no formal commitments. Some of the closest friends of Mr. Margiotti, including two or three well versed in politics, are inclined first to have some clarifying talks with Attorney General Schnader.

Margiotti to Talk With the Governor

If he can convince them that he stands four a constitutional convention, reduction of real estate taxation, unemployment insurance, minimum wage and hour laws for women, reduction of utility rates, old age pensions, slum elimination, abolition of privately-paid deputy sheriffs, collective bargaining—all parts of the Margiotti platform—they may be more sympathetic, despite the influence of Mr. Grundy and his associates.

Their position in the primary was not quite as advanced as that of Mr. Margiotti, who went considerable distance out on a limb in his castigation of the Republican leadership which now controls.

Meanwhile, Mr. Margiotti expects to have another conference with Gov. Pinchot. After their first meeting he said they expected to discuss political affairs again before September 7, and that expectations still holds.

It also is probable he will confer again with Attorney General Schnader and George H. Earle, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate.

But today's best bet, parlayed, is that he will not run for Governor on a third party ticket, and will either support the Democratic ticket or become actively engaged in the private practice of law to the immediate exclusion of politics.

BALLOT BOX GAS TEST HELD UP

U. S. Ryerson, of 1705 Knoxdale street, and N. C. Speer, of Thomas boulevard, co-inventors of the new tamper-proof gasometer box which shows how gas at the city plant is not for more than two hours in the mysterious room of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday, waiting to demonstrate their new device.

County Commissioner C. C. McCurdy, however, is loth at the South Park fair grounds and did not attend the meeting. The other two Commissioners left without seeing the device operate, even though as they left that would rather it be demonstrating when McCurdy was present.

YOUTH KEEPS GANG CODE

A suspected 18-year-old bandit held to the code of gangland today was arraigned in Morgan Court.

Adam Kline, of 842 South Canal street, wouldn't tell who his companions were when he was questioned by Magistrate J. W. McGeorge. He was ordered held without police cue check for record.

The youth was arrested yesterday after police gave chase to an alleged stolen automobile occupied by several young men. The others escaped and Kline hailed only after a shot had been fired at the ex-Patrolman Frank Hinds testified.

WHY PAUL JONES RYE WHISKEY IS BETTER!

ONE—Paul Jones Rye is made in Maryland, where the best Rye has always been made. The water is the Maryland limestone water which, time has proved, makes the best whiskey. The grain is the finest money can buy. The yeast is from a culture Frankfort has guarded for 50 years.

TWO—Paul Jones Rye is made by the old-fashioned hand-made method. It takes more time and skill—costs more—to make whiskey this way. But it's the only way great whiskey can be made. Frankfort has been making fine whiskies for four generations. Frankfort knows how!

FOUR ROSES RYE

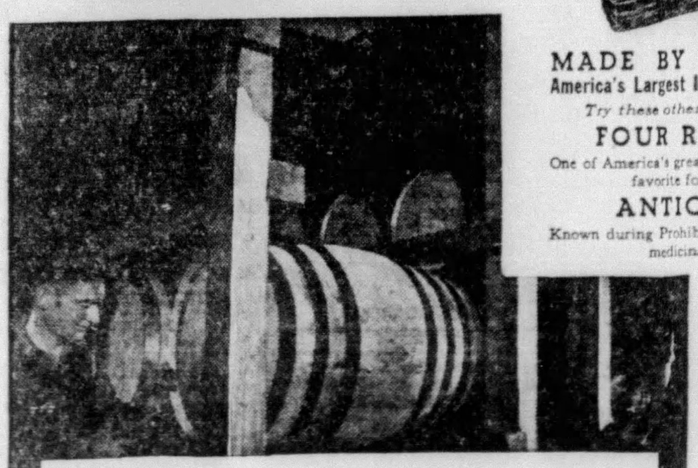
ANTIQUE RYE
Known during Prohibition as America's finest medicinal whiskey.



THREE—Frankfort knows that in making fine whiskey there is no substitute for Father Time. All the whiskies in Paul Jones Rye are naturally aged to ripe mellowness in charred oak barrels. That's why Paul Jones is richer—smoother. Buy a bottle at any good liquor store and discover that for yourself.

FOUR—Paul Jones Rye whiskey comes sealed in the exclusive Frankfort Pack that must be destroyed before the bottle within it can be removed. That makes purity certain. Buy it only in the patented pack—in full pints and quarts. You'll find Paul Jones most reasonably priced. Ask for it, too, in hotels and restaurants.

Notes in a Columnist's Little Red Book

Page 93—Give a few lines to the "nut" guy Billy Glason relates . . . It requires the lunatic whom mania who tearing his clothes to bits. Despite every scheme to keep him clothed, sooner or later the nut would find a secluded spot, divest himself of everything he wore, and rip each garment to shreds. . . . One day the superintendent got an idea—so he went to the problem-man and made a business proposition. "You'd like to do something useful and earn a little money, wouldn't you?" he asked. "I certainly would," the fellow replied. "This inactivity is driving me crazy." "All right, then," continued the superintendent. "I'm going to employ you at 25 cents a day to keep your clothes on—and to keep them in good condition. If you tear them up, you don't get paid, understand?" . . . The offer was accepted, and for several days the plan worked perfectly. . . . But one fine morning the superintendent discovered the fellow nude in his room and his shirt, trousers, socks on the floor shredded into a thousand particles. "What's the meaning of this," he demanded, "I thought you were working for me—is this the way to tend to your job?" . . . To which the nut replied, "Well you don't expect me to work on Sunday, do you?"

Page 187—Do a paragraph on Eddie Mellon, the lad who approached you under the marquee of the Hollywood during the heavy downpour the other day . . . "Say, Paul," he said, drawing you aside, "you remember me, don't you?" . . . And without waiting for your reaction, he continued: "I'm Eddie Mellon, the pro skater; remember I used to be a waiter at the Richman Club last year. I salted many a midnight chow-mein for you at the corner table near the door, you know me." . . . He was hatless, and his collarless shirt was tucked in at the neck defiant of the early chill . . . But you didn't remember him, and he read the query in your face. . . . "Eddie Mellon!" he repeated . . . Still you didn't recall him, but you became conscious of an impending request, and to get it over with, you lied, "Oh, yes, sure, now I remember!" . . . "Well, I hate to ask you this," he winced, "but I need a buck to get a bed overnight. My trunks are being held by the Clyde Lines—you see I just came up from Florida today, and I'm broke."

It was an embarrassing moment, especially so for a so-called big-shot columnist, because you had returned but an hour before from the Long Island gaming haize and your pockets were as empty as a Broadway theater . . . So you stuttered and floundered, helplessly . . . "I see you doubt my identity," was his interpretation. "Look here, this will tell you who I am." . . . And he dug out of a hip pocket a soiled and frayed scroll. You opened it and read: "In the name of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, Ruby Laffoon, Governor, to all to whom these presents shall come, greetings: Know ye that Honorable Eddie Mellon of New York City has been duly appointed to the Governor's staff with the rank and grade of Colonel." . . . There you were—two sad Kentucky Colonels, "with full power and authority to execute and discharge the duties of the said office"—moaning in the Broadway rain.

As if the Kentucky colonelcy hadn't brought you embarrassment before! . . . There was the day last April that Gov. Laffoon sent a personal messenger to Manhattan to confer the conored title upon you . . . There was beating of the drums and flashlight pictures . . . Your paper carried a composograph photo, humorously displaying you in full regalia and waving the flag of Kentucky . . . The Stem's wags—ever original—hailed you with "Howdy, Cunnel!" and "How are all yo' mint juleps, suh!" . . . But, nevertheless, you treasured the honor and framed the certificate that came with it above your desk . . . Then the very next day, your office-boy, the irrepressible and ambitious Ted Lloyd, dashed gaily into your sanctum . . . He was still flushed with the glee that comes from having a first novel accepted . . . It was the cunningly titled tome, jacketed as "Pulitzer Prize Winner" despite the fact Lloyd had never been closer to the famous award than Hitler is to the Nobel Peace Prize . . . "Boss, I've something to show you," he sputtered . . . And with a grand gesture he unrolled a parchment. It was a Kentucky colonelcy—the office boy, mind you!

Page 49—Gossip memos . . . The same medicos who told her she would have twins last year are now promising triplets to Jeanne Eagels, Jr., the lass who claims to be the daughter of the late dramatic star Johannes Steel, who foretold the Hitler "purge" a week before it blasted . . . is rushing a volume, "The Next World War" predicting a European war in less than a year . . . Joe Zelli is plotting the largest side-walk cafe in the world on 59th St. facing Central Park . . . "Catspaw," Harold Lloyd's latest screemie, came within $1,500 of the Music Hall record on opening day . . . Henry Myers, the composer, is in Polyclinic with a fractured limb . . . The Connors baby kidnaping has not been closed as a "lost and found" case by Department of Justice men who are beating down a hot clew. They contend the child would have been bitten to death by ants in 48 hours had it been "just lost."

Page 53—The "Mountain Song" yarn, worth a column . . . Broadway had dealt selfishly with Manning Sherwin, a young, sensitive composer . . . Strange how a street so full of yes-men can say "No" so often to a lad who deserves help . . . Penniless and hopeless, the map of Manhattan in his shabby hotel bedroom emphasized the fact that there are rivers on all sides . . . So, Manning wrote a few last-notes to his intimates, dropped them stampless in the mail chute, and started for the elevator . . . As he entered the lobby, a bellboy paged him . . . A phone call? It was the voice of Jay Faggen, a former millionaire whom the 1929 crash transformed into a press-agent . . . "Say, Manning," he shouted excitedly, "I just saw Lou Holtz, and he wants that Mountain Song for Harry Richman in the Hollywood Theater revue . . . There's a $200 advance waiting for you back-stage. Come right over!" . . . Manning suddenly remembered the story of how Dr. Samuel Johnson had written "Rasselas" in one night on the coffin of his mother to pay the burial expenses . . . There was much of this tragedy in his own plight . . . Of course, he went to see Holtz—and stayed away from the river . . . The song is two years old, selling in the thousands of copies, and promises to be a sophisticated hill-billy classic—he had written it in sardonic venom to spite a fate which refused an audience to his better talents . . . The song is—"She'll Be Coming Down the Mountain."

HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 23.—Hello! Because Anita Loos wrote a thin little book called "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," all the light-haired gals have aroused the brunet authoress of branding them as frivolous and predatory.

Not that it makes much difference — especially since the book is now almost forgotten, although it clicked off thousands for Anita and was a best-seller for over a year—Miss Loos feels that she should come to her own defense. In fact, she has chosen six of Hollywood's greatest blondes.

Miss Loos

"If you have had the good fortune to meet just six blondes, Marion Davies, Jean Harlow, Ann Harding, Constance Talmadge, Mary Pickford and Lillian Gish, you would need to know no other women in all the world," she said.

Miss Loos' analysis of her half dozen blondes was interesting to me, and I hope it will be to you—

"Marion Davies and Connie Talmage have beyond all doubt the quickest, wittiest brains I have ever known. If these two girls were ugly as sin they would still be famous. Their extreme mental agility would have made them great as writers.

"Mary Pickford is unexcelled in those particular feminine qualities of sweetness, understanding, sympathy.

"Jean Harlow and Lillian Gish have by far the greatest appeal to men of any women I have ever known, blonde or brunet."

Very well done, Anita.

At least she didn't pick at random without ideas.

For the past few months Cupid has been shooting his fancy arrows at Ernst Lubitsch and Sheila Manners. Many of the so-called cinema elite will probably have real fares when they learn that Sheila is a descendant of the early Spanish-California family, the De La Guerras—and that really gives her social prestige over anybody in Hollywood.

Drue Leyton, Fox cutie, got a big kick making a film test with Enzo Fiermonte, who is determined to crush those golden film gates . . . Ned Sparks has a Boston bull terrier that's beginning to look like his master, of all things.

Lowell Sherman has been under contract to Universal since January. Last Monday he started his first picture. Contrary to all studio rules there is a sign on his stage which reads: "Visitors welcome. See Lowell Sherman working at last!"

Shirley Temple's fan mail has leaped to over a thousand letters a week. That's a high rate now. There was a time, however, when Rudy Valentino and Norma Talmadge received as many as 5,000 per week.

Spencer Tracy brought a friend who resembled Hitler to lunch at Fox, and the guy got three offers to play comedy roles in the movies.

Get out your pads and pencils—if you're keeping a "slang dictionary" of Hollywood sayings. Here are some new words.

Zhuz—When the film has been recorded so the actors talk as if they had fur in their mouths.

Wuzzy—When it sounds as if players were talking through their noses.

Dizzies—Blonde feminine beauties.

Great Divides—Wrinkles.

Grease Ball—An actor whose face takes an inordinate amount of powder.

Kill the Balloon Tires—Order to makeup men to remove sags beneath eyes.

"L. Y."—To save the feeling of the ladies, invented by Ernst Lubitsch . . . Means "lousy."

"There was so much excitement at Alice Brady's Father eve, Alice let her pet ponies in the backyard for a few moments, quite forgetting that another pet — a lion — was also occupying about in the backyard. A shocking discovery awaited Alice when she went to the door was sent to the hospital. Just about that time, however, the lion had hopped back into the yard. Once more peace reigns at the Brady mansion.

Sten Style Copied

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 23.—A stir of feminine interest suggests that Anna Sten's colorless lipstick may be the next fad to come out of Hollywood. The Russian star used it in "Nana" and drew dozens of inquiring letters. They've started anew since she started work in "We Live Again."

MISS STEN

The colorless lipstick gives an appearance of moisture, almost glistening. The effect is the opposite extreme from the "strawberry jam lips" Joan Crawford tried so disastrously in "Rain." Miss Sten's screen lips are almost waxy in their paleness.

You also may expect to see the Russian star introduce a coiffure that will be copied. Her "Nana banks" of last year created such a furore that one New York department store beauty shop had 10 operators specializing in reproductions.

De Sylva Signs New Film Contract

Buddy (B. G.) DeSylva has signed a Fox contract for his services as producer, writer, casting director and supervisor in executive control of all productions under his name.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS :-: By William J. Lewis

Under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Culture Club, "Mother," a film based on a story by Gorki, will be shown in the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Friday evening, August 31. It is a Russian production with English dialogue, the action concerning a couple and their son, a peasant family, who become involved in a factory strike, in which the father, a strike-breaker, is killed. Eventually mother and son are shot down in a May Day celebration. It features Nikolai Batalov and Vera Baranovskaya, the latter in the title role. The film also will be shown in the Liberty Theater, South Side, August 30.

While the Fulton, reopened today, was closed there was installed an improved sound system, called Wide Range, developed in the Western Electric and Bell Telephone laboratories. Claims for the Wide Range is that it makes more life-like the vocal tones and brings out instrumental sounds that heretofore have not been heard in ensemble production, or heard only indistinctly.

Screen engagements often permit stage players to renew associations of other years, one instance being the appearance together of Arthur Byron and Helen Ware in Frank Craven's film production of his own stage comedy, "That's Gratitude." The last production in which they both had parts was "The Bishop's Carriage," 18 years ago.

* * *

It appears that combination houses will be getting back to original beginnings for a great deal of their "flesh" entertainment—where it is booked—this season. Throughout the country name bands are getting more of a play than presentations in the scattered bookings now being made. Of course, there are not a great many unit presentations at the present time. Some of the big theater chains that formerly made their own productions dropped out, and have stayed out. Loew houses in the East are booking units, but Louis K. Sidney, former Pittsburgher, Loew production head, has said his department is not contemplating production of any such shows. In Chicago now are a number of units organized for Mid-West tours, and some of them may eventually work their way East. And there probably will be an influx of shows now at the World's Fair after the exposition closes.

Walter Connolly, lately seen in the Warner in "Whom the Gods Destroy," and who has completed work in three other films, "Broadway Bill," "The Captain Hates the Sea" and "Orchids and Onions," will apepar in a Broadway play this fall. He is said to be considering offers of parts in "Laburnum Walk," to be produced by Gilbert Miller, and a play authored by Leslie Howard. Mr. Connolly has one of those Hollywood contracts that permits time off for stage work.

The recent appearance of Groucho Marx in a straight dramatic role in an eastern summer theater opens the way to some speculative thought, especially as it has been announced that Fred Stone will take to the dramatic stage in the fall. Will Rogers recently got away with it nicely in a Pacific Coast production of "Ah, Wilderness!" Other comedians probably could do the same. Especially Willie Howard, who in a musical production some years ago, surprised the audience by several dramatic impressions, including a most excellent one of the late Frank Bacon in a bit from "Lightnin'."

Through C. P. Graneker, of Select Theaters Corporation, New York, comes information that an early October attraction in the Nixon will be "No More Ladies," comedy by A. E. Thomas, now set for a return engagement on Broadway, where it was seen last season. It will be an American Theater Society offering on the road.

* * *

Irene Cowan, who has made a good impression on Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse audiences by her portrayal of roles of varied types, is the director of the next Playhouse production, "The Dark Tower," to be staged the week of September 3. The cast will include Edward Blaine, Betty Harris, James Macfarlane, Clara Landay, Norman Porter, Marx Hartman and Howard Blaine.

Helen Gets Orchids

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 23.—Even though Helen Hayes and Charles MacArthur are frequently separated by a continent, there is never a dull moment in their married life. When the star went home the other night after a long day's work in "What Every Woman Knows," she found a florist's box about the size of a steamer trunk. Inside were dozens of gardenias with a centerpiece of orchids. Also the following note from Charlie:

Miss Hayes

"Our anniversary is sometime this week. I hope this is the day."

After enjoying a good laugh, Helen wired back:

"You're getting warmer. Keep guessing."

Odds and Ends

A FAMILIAR variation of an old tale there is Richard Hinker's story of the musician who got his job because he was the conductor's cousin. Just before the particular orchestra was to go on the air, a small boy, who was visiting the studio, grabbed the musician's violin. He gave one of the keys a violent twist, loosening the string.

The musician chased the lad all over the studio and finally cornered him.

"Leggo sonn," wailed the youth. "I didn't do nothin'. I just loosened one of the strings."

"Yeah," cried the fiddler with, "I know that. But WHICH ONES?" . . .

INTO town last week came a young gentleman from Texas. He had letters to several Broadwayites from some mutual friends, and the boys escorted him around town for a night or two.

The first night, the Texan drank quite heavily and showed no ill effects. On the second night, just to see how much he could really stand, the boys placed a quart of rye in front of him in a restaurant and told him to enjoy himself.

To their amazement, this hardy bird finished the complete quart of rye with his meal. They ordered him another quart—and he went half through it with straight drinks without showing the slightest sign of drunkenness.

One Broadwayite, his eyes almost popping from his head, ventured an inane remark.

"Like the stuff, eh?" he asked.

The Texan smiled and poured himself another drink.

"Down home," he drawled, "I love it. But, hell—the humidity's so bad up here in New York that a feller can't really appreciate his liquor!" . . .

THEN there's the silly about the chap who walked into the butcher shop and said to the proprietor:

JEWS OF WORLD MEET IN 1935

International News Service.

GENEVA, Aug. 23.—Decision of the political committee of the world Jewish conference to hold a world congress here next year was recorded in a formal vote today, climaxing years of effort.

Jewish leaders since 1932 have been attempting to summon a general congress representing all nations.

The original plans to have delegates elected from all the nations to be represented were modified to the extent that the meeting will be held in July or August, 1935, "even if not all the members can be chosen by election."

This stipulation was made to meet conditions in Germany, where leaders here believe the Jews will be unable to hold elections and in the United States, where various powerful Jewish organizations have refused to recognize the Geneva deliberations as representative of unanimous Jewish world opinion.

$5,000 Value Placed On Lost Upper Teeth

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Mrs. Marie Storer, of Brownsville, values her lost upper teeth at $5,000. Mrs. Storer filed suit yesterday against Eula M. Kinkaid, of Newburgh, N. Y., in Fayette County Court, alleging that extraction of the teeth was necessary because of injuries she suffered as the Kinkaid machine collided with one in which she was riding.

Jerks, Gets Hurt

GLORIA SWANSON

GLORIA INJURED FILMING RAGE

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—A make believe temperamental outburst before the cameras has resulted in minor injury to Gloria Swanson, film star.

With a company on location in the Pasadena Busch Gardens, Miss Swanson had a scene in which, as the climax of a display of temperament, she was to jerk down the already frayed rope of a swing to emphasize her final remark.

The rope did not come loose from the heavy iron ring by which it was attached to the tree branch twenty feet above her, but instead brought the iron ring down with it. The metal object struck the star on the head, knocking her to the ground.

Studio officials said the fact the actress was wearing a heavy, helmet-type hat saved her from more serious injury.

4 SISTERS SUE OVER 'RED HOT' SHOW AD

Entertainment News Service.

DETROIT, Aug. 23.—Charging their pictures were being displayed on the front of a burlesque house as "red-hot entertainers in the show inside," The Four Probst Sisters, radio entertainers, today had filed a suit for $10,000 damages against the Empress Theater and obtained an injunction restraining the theater from further use of the photograph.

The girls are daughters of a minister.

"Dusty" Probst, acting as spokesman for the sisters, Priscilla, Hilda and Leonore, said they had been kidded and embarrassed with wise-cracks about being "burlesquettes" for the last month and finally visited the theater to investigate. She added:

"Sure enough, there was a picture of the four of us right out front. And not only that but it was an old and not very good picture. We have never been in burlesque, but the theater was advertising us as 'peppy, red-hot burlesque entertainers.'"

The girls said their father was the Rev. J. C. Probst, of Indianapolis, while a brother, the Rev. Arnold Probst, is pastor of a church here.

MR. TRUCK OWNER!

YOU BUY A HAT THAT FITS... You can likewise GET A TRUCK to fit your needs EXACTLY!

Stands to reason, doesn't it, that no one size or type of truck will fit the needs of various lines of business or conditions in various sections of the country or various kinds of hauling service. Many users have learned that fact by the costly trial-and-error method.

The buyer of a General Motors Truck doesn't have to be satisfied with a truck that only partially fits his needs. He gets a truck that exactly fits his business, his section of the country and his own specific needs. A conscientious General Motors Truck representative studies the requirements and then recommends the exact type of truck that will do the maximum amount of work and earn the maximum amount of profit.

Each of the many types of General Motors Trucks is "engineered for the job." And that's far from just a phrase . . . Consider, for instance, that there are nine different engines in the General Motors Truck line, twenty-seven different chassis types, fifteen different transmissions, twenty-four rear axles. Naturally it would be far easier to build a less complete line. But satisfying truck users by building trucks that exactly fit their needs is profitable business because it means profitable truck operation for owners.

Why not phone today and have one of our representatives bring you the facts. He'll gladly stake his time against yours in the sincere belief he has a story to tell that you'll find interesting as well as profitable.

ROBBERY TRIAL REVEALS MAN HAS 2 WIVES

Unexpectedly Floyd Cain's love affairs were aired today in Criminal Court.

Floyd, who hails from Belle O., was arraigned before Judge James H. Gray for sentence, having pleaded guilty to robbing his brother-in-law, Nick Kalacros, 604 Cedar avenue, of $44.

One of Nick's friends popped up to announce that Cain had two wives at the same time.

Yes, that was true, Cain admitted, but he had told the second one he was already married and she hadn't objected.

So Judge Gray sentenced him to six months for robbery and told the District Attorney's office to notify Ohio authorities of Cain's bigamous tendencies.

DAVIS ASSAILS DEFAULTERS

HARRISBURG, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Europe's war debts to the United States should not be canceled, says United States Senator James J. Davis, but should be let stand "as a monument to remind us of our folly in lending the money."

The Pennsylvania Senator voiced his opposition to debt cancellation last night in an address before the Veterans' Association of the Pennsylvania Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias.

The Veterans' Association named David Quinn, of Folsom, Delaware County, as president, and chose four vice presidents: Samuel C. Noblette, Philadelphia; J. B. Pancoast, Pittsburgh; W. H. Watson, Pittsburgh, and A. N. Gutermuth, Rochester.

After the grand lodge had elected Stanley J. Davis, Scranton mayor, as grand chancellor, the Pythian Sisters named these leaders:

Grand chief, Mrs. Gladys Stine, Huntingdon; grand senior, Mrs. Bertha Hartman, Hazelwood; grand junior, Mrs. Agnes Johnston, Harrisburg; grand manager, Mrs. Henrietta Richert, Sewickley; grand mistress of records and correspondence, Miss Nellie True, Erie; grand mistress of finance, Mrs. Jennie Rearic, New Castle; grand protector, Mrs. Edith McCauley, Sharpsville; grand trustee, Mrs. Mabel Pritchard, McKeesport; grand guard, Mrs. Doda Carroll, Turtle Creek.

DR. EDMUNDSON IN RENO FOR SECOND DIVORCE

NEW YORK Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—It took an established trouper to inject the only real shot of enthusiasm the languishing legitimate theater enjoyed this summer. James Barton, best known as a song and dance man, performed the miracle by stepping into Henry Hull's misery role in "Tobacco Road."

Barton has for years been one of the unpredictable stars of variety, working as fancy dictated, but stopping shows wherever he appeared. His delineation of a crumbling drunk has long been an epic of the halls, but few thought him a player of sustained dramatic roles.

Henry Hull had given such splendid account in the original turnip-gnawing part that many critics still think his play should have received the watrouscalitt prize. When he was called to Hollywood it appeared inevitable that the epic of poor white trash must close. No star—no show!

But someone thought of Barton. He went into the role at the peak of the hottest weather, filling the shoes of a performer who had singularly distinguished himself. And gushed a jet of histrionic history. So much so, a major film firm immediately signed him for stardom.

Then there is Morton Downey whose thin tenor curling from midriff has been heard so frequently over the radio and at the cabaret. He decided also to change his pace, organized a band, varied baton wielding with a few ballads and has been cleaning up in a tour of New England. And adding to his famous badge collection.

There is something wrenching about the revival of amateur nights in the cabarets recently. They bring out a thin army of those who, fighting terrific odds, still hope. The women especially—women who have passed the Rubicon without a map. And with tense effort and loyal rouge pot assembled all that was left of charm and youth with a kind of a desperate gallantry. They sing coy ballads too coyly, fumbling their hands and ending in cold, ghastly silence. The other evening I watched one who sang her best. At the finish she smiled archly, a tendon in her neck bulging out like a death warrant. But the applause she expected did not come and she walked off swiftly with burning cheeks. And a heart of lead.

I did not live in the town when Tony Pastor's amateur night was one of the exciting amusements. Here came artists of the saloon back room and honky tonks hoping for larger recognition. They were toughened by sneers, and even reaching out with a hook to yank them to the wings did not stop them from coming back. This was good fun, rowdy and raucous, but every piff-awmer got $2, plenty of free beer and often an extra shower of coins. There was no sense of humiliation.

Along water fronts of roaring West and South streets at sundown is a relaxation to be found nowhere else in the metropolis. Everybody seems leaning or sprawling in doorways, curbs or dock ends. There is little talk, much staring. Now and then a tipsy, jawing harridan staggers among them, scattering epithets as filthy as her bedraggled skirt. Yet no one replies. Mostly men of the ships, one wonders if they are dreaming of the sea. Puffing pipes and dreaming of the sea!

On wide South street are a few roughly timbered old eating places with rheumatic rafters a kitchen revealing shining copper and almost always a profane parrot. There are shabby missions, too. One the sickly salmon pink of English almshouses. All are lettered with comforting messages: "Jesus Loves You," "God is Love," and "When Did You Write to Mother?" River front dogs are miscellaneous array, slinking as though expecting a cuff, long tailed, pitifully lean. They belong to everybody.

Thingumbobs: Vaughn De Leath, radio singer collects earrings . . . Irving Berlin, almost a teetotaler, is said to be an expert judge of wines . . . Owney Madden buys every mystery novel as soon as published . . . W. R. Sheehan was the first New Yorker to own a Rolls-Royce . . . Helen Wills Moody cannot visit a dog shop without buying a Sealyham . . . Conrad Bercovici, who lives in a Riverside mansion, likes to give dinner parties in his kitchen . . . W. C. Fields still rehearses his juggling stunts an hour daily.

VETS DEMAND U. S. GO LIMIT FOR DEFENSE

Back Merchant Marine; Urge Job Preference For Men of '98

Resolutions urging the federal government to build up its lines of national defense with particular attention being paid to merchant marine and naval strength were adopted by the Spanish War Veterans here in national encampment yesterday. Another resolution called upon federal, state and municipal governments to give preference to Spanish war veterans for public jobs.

The resolutions follow:

"Be it resolved that we most heartily indorse and commend the action taken by the present national administration for the increase of our lines of defense—land, sea and air; particularly do we commend the announced purpose of building our Navy up to treaty strength and the actual work now under way toward that accomplishment.

"Realizing that our merchant marine in time of war is an auxiliary essential to the effectiveness of the Navy and the transport service of the Army and in time of peace is a necessity for the independent and economical transportation of our products of agriculture and industry alike to their competitive markets abroad, we urge further measures to build up our merchant marine on a permanent basis in keeping with our country's position among the nations of the earth.

FULL DEFENSE URGED

"We urge that provisions for full and complete compliance with the National Defense Act shall not be further delayed. Recognizing the fact that the young manhood of America constitutes the strongest force in our national defense, we urge that there shall be no curtailment of the facilities for military training.

"We further urge that in the event of war the same conditions which authorize and require the conscription of the service of men, likewise authorize and should require the conscription of commerce and industry. In the defense of country, property is no more sacred than life."

JOBS FOR VETS!

The second resolution reads:

"Whereas, it appears that from now on the question of employment for Spanish War veterans will become more serious by reason of their increasing age, group insurance, industrial pension, workmen's compensation laws, which practically prohibit their securing new employment in private industry and,

"Whereas, if employment is not provided for this class of veterans, the time may soon come when many of them will be public charges, dependent upon the state, county or municipality for the support of themselves and families, and,

"Whereas, it appears that practically the only avenues of employment remaining open to them are governmental.

"Therefore, be is resolved, that we urge whenever possible, Spanish War veterans be given preference in employment by the federal, state, county and municipal governments."

SHADYSIDE PAIR PARTING AS FRIENDS

Socialites First Wed 22 Years Ago Again To Seek Decree

The socially prominent Edmundsons are going to be divorced again.

Dr. Frank B. Edmundson is already at a dude ranch just outside Reno, Nev.

Stunning attractive Mrs. Reba Moore Smith Edmundson has deserted the Edmundson home at 5317 Fifth avenue, an exclusive Shadyside. For the reassuring breeze at Bonnie Point, on Lake Chautauqua.

The Edmundsons were married 22 years ago and this is the second time they have taken the Reno cure.

But after the physician had gone West and obtained a divorce some four years ago, he and Mrs. Edmundson were remarried in New York about a year later.

However, there are indications that the Edmundsons, even after their second split, intend to remain friendly. Over the telephone from her lake residence today Mrs. Edmundson laughed as she confirmed reports of the divorce action and explained:

"It's a very friendly action. We're both relieved."

And from Reno Dr. Edmundson's attorney said that mental cruelty in the mildest form would be charged. The doctor arrived in Reno 13 days ago.

Mrs. Edmundson said no, she had no intention of remarrying just now. The Edmundson children, she said, were grown and their custody will not be involved in the divorce action.

Dr. Edmundson is on the staff of the Homeopathic Hospital. Mrs. Edmundson has been active there in social work.

color was added to the ceremony by the formal visitation to the convention by Mrs. Mamie B. Schmidt, of Dallas, Tex., national president of the Auxiliary, and Mrs. Isabella Alexander, 72, of Cleveland, first president of the Auxiliary.

They appeared before the convention with a color guard of girls.

Adjournment followed the induction.

Later, retiring Commander-in-chief William H. Armstrong, of Racine, Wis., was presented with a chest of silver by the convention and with a pipe by the Auxiliary.

TRIP TO PHILIPPINES

Rice W. Means, chairman of the legislative committee, received a check for $2,000 from the veterans, and declared he and his wife will use the money to go to the Philippines, where he has not been since the war.

Selection of encampment city for 1936 was voted held over until next year's meeting in Texas.

At yesterday afternoon's session, the veterans heard the economy ridden federal administration roundly criticized for the curtailment of veterans' pensions by judges, Congressmen and Senators—guest speakers of the encampment.

Not once, but numerous times, the demand was made that in future wars the federal government not only conscript men into military service, but commandeer money—profits from business and industry deriving benefits from war.

F. W. Stacey, aged veteran, voiced the first denunciation of the "moneyed class." He declared:

"In the next war, don't draft just men, but draft both men and money. If this is done all the juicy profits of war will be eliminated."

NOT THROUGH YET

United States Senator Pat McCarren, of Nevada, also expressed himself along the same line. The Senator was greeted with wild and enthusiastic cheering of the veterans and at the conclusion of his 15-minute address, he had to make two "encore" appearances before the madly cheering crowd. Senator McCarren led the fight for the veterans' bonus measure at the last session of Congress.

He wound up his stirring address with a plea for unity on the part of veterans and declared:

"We didn't get all we wanted, but we're not through yet."

Former United States Senator Rice W. Means, chairman of the veterans' legislative committee, launching an attack on the present administration, took issue with a statement attributed to President Roosevelt. He said:

"I want you to know I disagree with the man who says that because a man wore a uniform for a year or two he is not in a special class."

The former Senator bitterly assailed the National Economy Act and defeat of the veterans' bonus bill. He appealed to the veterans to be loyal to their government and sounded a warning against the "insidious forces" he said are seeking the overthrow of the present form of government. He declared:

"In these days of confusion, the nation needs every one of you . . . We must fight any elements who come in to try to break down our form of government. These elements try to impose some foreign system as being better than ours.

"Those who don't like our form of government should get out."

At the conclusion of the speaking program, which also included addresses by Congressman Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota; Supreme Court Justice Edward S. Matthias, of Ohio, and Rear Admiral Richmond P. Hobson, hero of the Merrimac in Santiago Harbor, resolutions were adopted, with a solemn pledge of patriotism bitterly denouncing communism and "men who, in the exercise of their power in public office, make questionable their loyalty."

The resolutions demanded that there be no curtailment of educational advantages for the youth of the country and insisted that institutions of public education be kept free of Communistic teachings. Deploring and denouncing the action of "those groups which seek to induce the youth of our country to refuse to serve in the event of war," the resolutions placed the brand of "traitor" upon any person who makes such refusal.

ADMIRAL URGES WAR ON DOPE

An appeal to Spanish War veterans for support in the enactment of uniform state narcotic control laws was made yesterday by Rear Admiral Richmond P. Hobson, hero of the Merrimac, and the man who bottled up the Spanish fleet in Santiago Harbor.

Admiral Hobson made two addresses—one to the main convention body of the thirty-sixth national encampment of United Spanish American War Veterans and another to the Ladies' Auxiliary. To both, he related some of the horrors of the traffic in narcotics and impressed upon them the need of uniform state enforcement laws.

The admiral also discussed the urgent need for more effectual national defense and stressed the importance in times of peace as well as war of the merchant marine. He declared:

"The Navy and our merchant marine constitute the major agencies of national defense."

Borough Fight Goes To Supreme Court

West Homestead's failure to fix the borough tax millage for 1934 has reached the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

Late yesterday Burgess Richard H. Lawry, of West Homestead, and the three minority councilmen, Wesley Baird, William Klein and Joseph M. McGuckin filed an appeal from the decision of Judge Samuel H. Gardner, who handed down a peremptory mandamus order requiring the councilmen to meet and fix the millage. Attorney A. C. Hepps filed the appeal.

36 Cents Reward Pair for Holdup

Two Negroes held up Anthony Metro, of 918 Cherokee street, at Bryn Mawr road and Iowa street last night and fled after taking 36 cents and two street car tokens, Metro informed police.

Emilio Aguinaldo's Capture Due to Funston

The capture of Emilio Aguinaldo, doughtiest of Filipino insurrectionists, practically ended guerilla warfare and hastened the end of the Philippine campaign following the Spanish-American War.

That event has not gone down in history as one of the decisive battles of the world and the reason lies probably in the fact that only five white men took part in the actual capture.

It's a fascinating story. The late Brig. Gen. Frederick Funston, then a colonel of volunteers, is the man to whom most of the credit must go. It was he who conceived the idea, and selecting his aides, finally carried it to completion.

Aguinaldo had successfully kept himself buried so far in the interior any campaign against him always was sure to fail. His whereabouts was unknown to the Americans. Always, he was apprised of troop activities and had plenty of time to move casually, with the help of the island natives.

Finally, in 1901, there came into headquarters and to Col. Funston's attention a letter—a formal report of Lieut. J. D. Taylor, Twenty-fourth Infantry, of the voluntary surrender of a small band of insurgents, the leader of whom professed to have a number of letters from Aguinaldo to some of his lieutenants.

The letters, addressed to Baldomero Aguinaldo, a cousin; Alejandrino, Urbano Lacuna, Pablo Tecson, Simon Tecson, Teodoro Sandico and several other insurgent leaders were in cipher. The leader who surrendered himself and the correspondence gave his name as Cecilio Segismundo.

BAND SURRENDERS

He related how he had left Aguinaldo's headquarters the month before, accompanied by 12 armed men of Aguinaldo's escort. He had brought the packet of letters to be delivered to Urbano Lacuna, another insurgent chief in the Nueva Ecija Province, who was to forward them to the persons to whom they were addressed.

Segismundo's little band had a terrible journey down the coast and across the mountains. They encountered a small detachment of American troops and lost two men. Finally, footweary and hungry, Segismundo reached the little town of Pantabangan. Thinking the local presidente, or mayor, to be friendly to the insurgent cause, like most of the natives holding office under American occupation at the time, Segismundo went to him for help.

The presidente, however, was loyal to the American cause. He urged Segismundo to give himself up.

Through the presidente, acting as a go-between, finally Lieut. Taylor convinced Segismundo this was what he should do. The whole band surrendered and Col. Funs-

Gu Gu Boys of '98 Strut Their Snakes About City

The Gu Gu boys, slick and slimy keepers of the Ophidian and others of the Military Order of the Serpent, crawled out of their supreme lair to slither through streets and hotel lobbies last night in a program of serious funny business. It was the annual snake parade of the order, a division of the United Spanish-American War Veterans holding their thirty-sixth annual encampment here this week.

Hilariously funny, these veterans of island campaign service in the garb of natives—grass skirts, outlandish headgear, bolos and all. Three huge serpent dummies, hoisted on the shoulders of the paraders, gave the crowds a thrill and the antics of the veterans dressed as natives gave the whole affair a circus atmosphere.

Led by the Supreme Gu Gu Grandississimo, William Stieger, of Brooklyn, who looked downright ferocious in his "wild-man" makeup, all the officers of the order from the Supreme Datto, the Supreme Slick and Slimy Keepers of the Ophidian and the Supreme Thrice Infamous Inferior Gu Gu down to the Supreme Lord High Keeper of the Sacred Amphora and the Supreme Abagado de Nacional and the Supreme Mabalasig were in the procession.

The wild call of the Thrice Dulcet Yawler of the Jungle and the Insidious Thumper of the Sanctified Sheephide summoned the Snake veterans to parade formation. The procession wended its way through the streets and hotel lobbies, finally winding up in Moose Temple for the convocation of the Bud Dajo and Bayani degrees on new members.

B. L. Sucop, former city director of supplies and the Grand Gu Gu Grandississimo of Pennsylvania, was kept out of the parade because of the theft of his native uniform earlier in the evening. He said someone had taken it from his parked automobile.

4 VETS OF '98 ORGANIZE

Four buddies of the Spanish American War, reunited after 34 years at the national encampment here this week, were on their way home today after forming a permanent artillerymen's organization.

William I. Jenkins, of Washington; John Schlotterbeck, of Chicago; W. Henry Smith, of Newport News, Va., and Edward J. Barrett, of Brooklyn, were sent with Battery M, in 1900, to represent the 6th United States Artillery, at the Artillery School at Fort Monroe, Va.

Not until this week did these friends meet again.

Their reunion was the foundation for an organization of all artillerymen who were in the United States Army during the period from April 1, 1898, to July 4, 1902.

Pushcart Peddler Sought at Sea, May Enter Races

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

By this time you know all about a peddler sticking up an armored car with a pushcart.

A Manhattan peddler's license is only ten dollars a year. So we figure he made clone to $427,000 on the deal. That violates the NRA code for pushcarts.

Do you remember the prison riots last week? The boys were mad because they couldn't get out and grab a piece of this job.

The police are looking for the peddler out at sea. Maybe he is going to enter the pushcart in the big yacht races.

From now on our traffic cops will be pretty strict on pushcarts that don't stop for red lights.

But, we will get that guy when he comes in to have his license renewed.

MRS. WILLIAM S. MOORHEAD

There's just a bit more news about one of Saturday's socially prominent brides—Katherine Homer, of New York, daughter of Mme. Louise Homer, formerly of Pittsburgh, noted operatic contralto, and Sydney Homer, of New York. Through the Spyglass

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6500 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPYGLASS. Or send in a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

Something to tuck into the bag of the girl-going-away-to-school . . . or for that matter, just the girl-who's-going-away! A couple of important travel notes thought up by the wily brain of one of your internationally-known beauticians.

Firstly, a tiny case containing six "washcloths," if you can call them such . . . a sort of meshy texture that has been treated with this same famous soul's soap. Plunk one of them into the basin of water . . . and behold, your water is softened and smoothed into the proper lathering quality, 50c the package of 6.

The other highlight being—face tissues for traveling. No dragging 'round of a huge bulk of them . . . this new kit folds 48 sheets (24 doubles) into about a half-inch thickness and 6 inches square that will fit into the corner of your bag and never let you know it is there! When using, just tear off a sheet as if it were writing paper! 40c the kit.

Item: With nippy mornings coming on (we've already had a couple!) what could be more apropos than griddle cakes or the subject of waffles? And now comes the timely news of the grand new flour for either, with which to knock out a plateful or two! In 14-ounce boxes . . . at 25c.

The fashion sources say "wear pearls" . . . and we follow the leader like a good child by patiently digging up the news that one of the town's better jewelry shops is putting on a special . . . a purchase that they up and made just so you and we could pop forth sporting a strand of "poils" 'round our Adam's apple.

And so . . . these are going to sell for $1.00 . . . in spite of the fact that even the boxes they are packed in state that they're $3.75 values! Lovely gleaming ones of ivory color . . . with a white gold-filled clasp that is almost worth this alone! In 18-inch length.

If you're to have a solid footing with smartsters this fall . . . you'll look to your shoes and especially to THESE shoes that one of the shops is featuring at $2.59, no-more-no-less! For they're values if we ever looked into a value's eye! Suedes, gabardines, marcella cloths, all shoes in all styles, and all colors that the new season has predicted! Even evening slippers!

Not more than two weeks ago we were goggling at a New York "ad" about jeweled footgear for evening being the rage. And here it is . . . right on our own family doorstep . . . for $2.59! Nice satin ones . . . cocktail sandals . . . with rhinestones plinkety-plinking their way across the toes and up the ankle strap! There are velvets in weensy strips holding your toes together! There are faille fabrics with silver kid trims! And fabrics "shot" with tinsel (like so many of the new frocks you've seen or heard about!).

SPEAK UP, SISTERS, :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Kisses Ruth but Casts Glances at Sister

SYMPATHY BOUND THEM TOGETHER. She was in the hospital and he had another girl who had given him the BOUNCE. So they had a human bond, very human, indeed. And they grew fond of one another. Although at first she thought him but NICE.

He'd kiss her. But he never MAWLED her, so she says. And she liked the tender sentiment. She was only in her teens. In November of last year he began seeing her OFTEN. So Ruth tells me.

They went to the movies together and sat across from one another at softly lit tables . . . And where is there such a binding link? It gives an inside line on the other fellow that all the reading of squash literature never can furnish . . . That is, if you're wise . . .

Miss Brunot

Then the fellow showed a predilection for Ruth's sister. When he was kissing Ruth he would cast sweet glances over his shoulder at the sister . . . He hadn't made up his mind . . . Yet he had never made her think she was the ONLY ONE. And it hurt Ruth . . . And she cried (the sympathy gag again) and he came running back as a sheep to the fold.

RENEW FRIENDSHIP

They didn't see each other for awhile, for no special reason. Perhaps there was a wee bit of ANOTHER FELLOW. Ruth confesses. But in February (the months have a good deal to do with this narrative) back he pranced, and she took him to her school dance. Time slipped by, and he disappeared again . . . (Quite in order). And Ruth heard rumors of his going STEADY with someone else. . . . She called him up, but when he came around, he never took her anywhere . . . He still was AFFECTIONATE, though.

Finally Ruth moved, and one day, at the movies, she SAW HIM. And he took her to a supper dance, and they kept time to the waltz . . . But again they quarreled, and Ruth went to see his mother, and the old lady BAWLED her OUT. And wasn't Ruth mad!

And yet she says she is LOST without him.

I'm rehashing all this so that the other sisters may avoid similar mistakes . . . It is a certain line of action all too common . . . I hold, a perfectly SANE GIRL should read between the lines, and should have known in advance what she was UP AGAINST. No man who tries to make love to your sister when he's courting you is worth a plugged nickel . . .

A DOUBLE-CROSSER

Ruth will do well if she overcomes this LOST feeling. And if she gives up what is commonly known as a double-crosser.

Triflers aren't worth their salt.

There are GOOD MEN IN PITTSBURGH, Ruth. Find one of them. Ones that don't prey on your sympathies . . . Ones that don't make eyes at sister over your shoulder . . .

Remember, sister, when a fellow's really interested, you don't have to go to his home to see him . . . He'll be wearing a path to your OWN FRONT DOOR.

GAY AND POPULAR

Red-Headed people always have plenty of PEP, although sometimes they misdirect this PEP. Maybe, LIGHTNING is no exception.

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am red-headed, gay and popular. I have loved a boy since the seventh grade. We have grown up together. But I never knew of my devotion until I confessed it to the boy in question last December. He is very reserved, and comes from a family of high standing.

We both graduated this year, and as I had not gone to any of the school affairs because he does not dance and didn't want to go, it was a surprise when I took my cousin and went to the Junior-Senior Prom. I had a new dress, and wanted to wear it. I had been there an hour when in walked the boy friend. As soon as I saw him he began to stagger and act foolish. I thought he was intoxicated and as he and I have often talked against this very thing, I was very nervous.

I slipped away from the crowd, and he found me, and I was crying. I gave him every chance to explain, but he did not. Then he left me, and I went back and danced. I left the building as soon as I could, and hurried after him. But he was out of my sight. I was so troubled, I called my father up to come and take me home.

JUST 'ACTED' DRUNK

On Friday I saw him, and on Sunday he came to see me. I plainly stated what I thought to him, and he apologized and kissed and made up. He said and also proved he was not intoxicated. But only acted that way for my benefit. I had not smelled liquor on him.

He seems sincere, yet my friends say he is riding around in another car. Please give me your advice, as I do not want our romance to go on the rocks. LIGHTNING.

Well, Lightning, you are up against a darned clever fellow. One who would work any sort of a prank on you to get his own way. Imagine his lack of caring what other people were thinking, when he STAGGERED in to the dance merely to make you miserable! I scarcely would think you would desire such brazenness in a husband.

Maybe his seeing you for so long has made it become a habit with you, and your affection is not as deep as you think. You and he have no tastes in common, and he is much more shrewd than you. Is that a good match to make, Lightning?

He'll make you walk the chalk line if you marry him. And if you don't, he'll embarrass you publicly. I have never met the like, and don't want to. Sometimes, Lightning, letting one romance go on the rocks will lead you right up to a happier one.

FOR WEDDING GUEST AND BRIDE

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Vionnet made the deft model above, in a soft periwinkle blue flat crepe. The graceful detailing on the back bodice is hand faggoting of matching tint. The front is without any detail to speak of, permitting the use of handsome jewelry.

Fuchsia flat crepe, cut on lines which remind one of Vionnet, makes the matron's frock above. Note the ingenious tucking at the elbows of the tie-around kimono jacket, which covers a formal frock.

Brides don't have to wear traditionla satin. This one is a floating picture in white chiffon with a shallow neck draped softly with pinch tucks like those which shape the long sleeves. A sash of the chiffon is molded flat to the waistline in an Empire line and becomes a petalled train of center aisle drama in back. The skirt itself is trained in petal shape.

THE LATE August wedding is always one which provides powerful pageant possibilities because gardens are ripe for natural settings or for plunder to decorate church and house, and because the summer styles are just giving way to an acceptance of advance models. It's the contemplative wedding guest who doesn't turn up looking as a million in a dernier cri, and have a big time figuring out the fashion implications of the bridal parties' new clothes.

The trend in the latest wedding gowns seems to be away from the basque and bouffant glass type of costume, developed in sheathlike satin, and toward softer models which show a slightly lower neckline and less glove-like sleeves. To be sure, a really low neckline or an always questionable taste for a bride, but the newest efforts are a bit softer and probably a bit more becoming than last year's straight lastings.

THE WEDDING guest who drapes her breast with a new gown for a ceremony at this time of the year can plan for the future of her wardrobe if she eschews prints in favor of a clear, plain colored frock. Because, you see, she will have a dress-up frock which can be remembered later on with her dress-up fur coat for afternoon parties of all formal natures.

A summery hat to wear with it for the August date is the link which ties the two possibilities of one costume. Now is the time to get one more joyous appearance out of a cartwheel. A big brown halo hat of fine lace, perhaps with a brown velvet crown, will set off a copper colored crepe gown dashingly; brown suede gloves and shoes and a large serving of green orchids (all useful later on with other costumes, except the orchids) are all the extras needed to achieve a smart mid-August toilette.

THE BRIDE who does not plan a very formal wedding, all dressed up in veil and train, will find the recipe for the wedding guest sketched above just about what she will want for a ceremony in the rector's study, or in her own apartment on the occasion of a second marriage. In a way, brides who do decide against a white satin wedding get a break, for short of fireman's red or black, they can get themselves up in their favorite shade and look their very best on the great day. Many a girl looks awful in all-white, even if she isn't particularly wan from pre-nuptial entertainments.

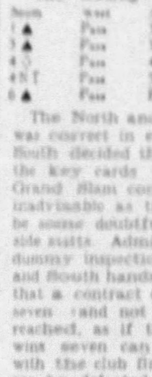
Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By Josephine Culbertson

A Forbidden Lead That Worked

One of the tenets of Bridge, as I have often pointed out, is the oft-cited Bridge axiom, for however risky it is to have rules and formulas, there are a number of them that exist with purpose when they are taken not literally. But, perhaps, just as the best way to fight poison may be with more poison, the best way to counteract axioms may be with more axioms—or perhaps it's just a nearsighted axiom, anyway—



Mrs. Culbertson

This statement is quite true, although

It sounds just like a whopper.

The "proper" lead, against a Slam,

Is often most improper.

On today's hand the West player committed the unpardonable sin of leading away from a King-Jack tenace, but in so doing found the only way of defeating the opponent's Slam.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3♠	Pass
3♠	Pass	3 N T	Pass
4♢	Pass	4♠	Pass
4 N T	Pass	5 N T	Pass
6♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

The North and South bidding was correct in every particular. South decided that even though the key cards were located a Grand Slam contract would be inadvisable as there seemed to be some doubtful spots in the side suits. Admittedly, a double dummy inspection of the North and South hands would indicate that a contract of either five or seven (and not six) should be reached, as if the club finesse wins seven can be made and with the club finesse losing, six can be defeated. However, the added factor that with any other Opening lead but a heart a Small Slam can be made, whether or not the club finesse works, suggests a Small Slam contract as a sound and conservative one.

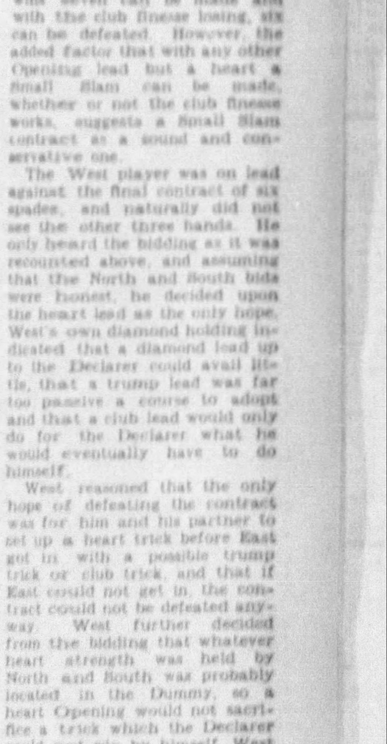
The West player was on lead against the final contract of six spades, and naturally did not see the other three hands. He only heard the bidding as it was recounted above, and assuming that the North and South bids were honest, he decided upon the heart lead as the only hope. West's own diamond holding indicated that a diamond lead up to the Declarer could avail little, that a trump lead was far too passive a course to adopt and that a club lead would only do for the Declarer what he would eventually have to do himself.

West reasoned that the only hope of defeating the contract was for him and his partner to get up a heart trick before East got in with a possible trump trick or club trick, and that if East could not get in, the contract could not be defeated anyway. West further decided from the bidding that whatever heart strength was held by North and South was probably located in the Dummy, so a heart Opening would not sacrifice a trick which the Declarer could not win by himself. West opened a low heart rather than one of the honors merely to give the Declarer a guess in case Dummy held both the Ace and Queen.

It is easily seen that with the heart lead South's perfectly sound contract was doomed to defeat. South had to go up with the Ace of hearts on the first trick, and when the club finesse lost East returned a heart and put the Declarer down one trick. With any other lead but a heart the time factor would have swung over to the Declarer's side and he would have been able to set up his clubs before the defense could set up their heart trick.

Tomorrow's Hand

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

(Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your question to Josephine Culbertson, in care of the Sun-Telegraph.)

Aid to Good Manners.

Let your children have "dressing-up" parties with your old clothes. There is nothing that gives children a more enjoyable way of being mannerly than to allow them to play as grown-ups.

Given in Marriage

A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Tell of Seeing Signal Lights

I stared at my small son and his cousin in the helpless astonishment every mother feels when she comes face to face with some prank, casual or schemed, of her child, for which she is totally unprepared; some evidence of the separate world which a child creates for himself and into which adults do not enter.

If anyone told me that Junior and Roderick could simulate slumber so effectually as to deceive me, I should have greeted the assertion with derision, more or less polite according to the degree of my intimacy with the person making it. At Lillian, for instance, I should have hooted, practically.

But Lillian's keen eyes had been no sharper than mine, I remembered, as we stood by the cots of the apparently sleeping children. True, we had not looked very searchingly at them, taking their slumber for granted. But we could have been deceived at all astounded me.

What had Junior just said? "We never thought we could fool you, but we did." It had been a prank, not a deceit, and I treated it accordingly.

"You certainly fooled both Aunt Lillian and me," I told them. "But let us not talk about it now. I want to hear how you went away, and whether you knew anything about the light that flashed into the windows."

THE SIGNAL LIGHTS

"O-o-o-h! Did you see that too?" the boys exclaimed as with one voice. "That was the funniest thing!" Junior went on. "It came from the bungalow, and we were going in to find out who was doing it, but we knew Hank and Bill weren't in there, because they'd gone out to the barn, and we got kinda scared, me and Rod did. I guess we were cowards, all right."

"Thank God you were," I exclaimed fervently, hugging them tightly to me. If their account was to be believed, and I would have staked my life on it, then someone sinister, dangerous, had been in the bungalow, trying to signal someone in the house. What would have been the fate of our little lads if they had gone into the little house to investigate that flashing?

"Remember, boys, always," I said huskily, "that a really brave person is never foolhardy. If someone you knew had been in the bungalow, and in danger, and you had gone in to try to rescue him, then you would have been justified. But you were not cowards. You were wise boys to keep away from the bungalow while that flashing was going on. But, tell me, when did you go away from the house?"

"Right after Hank and Bill," Junior said.

"Did you stay awake all that time?" I asked. "Surely, you could not have had an alarm clock!"

"Of course not. It would have wakened Faith." Junior disclaimed indignantly. "But we managed. We had human alarm clocks."

STANDING WATCH

"How was that?" I asked, realizing by the dramatic pause that the question was expected of me.

"We were each other's alarm clocks," Junior said proudly. "First, I stayed awake half an hour and let Rod sleep, and then—"

"And then he waked me up," Roderick chimed in, "and I stayed awake and let him sleep for half an hour. And then we did it all over again, until morning.

"The one who was awake watched out of the window the last hour," Junior resumed, "and when we saw the light go on in the bungalow, we waited until we saw Hank and Bill come out, after they had put out the light, and then we shinned out, and downstairs, and outdoors, where we hid till they started."

"But—you were dressed in your everyday clothes when I saw you," I said. "How did you manage your dressing without turning on the light, which we would have seen?"

How to Keep Well

Hernia Operation Simple And Is Permanent Cure

During the World War many youths were rejected from military service because of rupture. Most of these young men, anxious to serve their country were disappointed at being rejected. But it was not safe to expose them to conditions sure to be harmful.

This condition, more commonly known to us as rupture," is the same as "hernia." It is a defect due to a mechanical weakness found in certain muscles. Evidence of the condition is found in the lower part of the abdomen, on either side, and around the umbilicus, or "belly button."

The weakness may be present at birth. But unless a pronounced rupture or hernia exists, it is often not detected until adult life. Severe manual labor, strenuous exercise or any work that requires sudden and continued exertion, may cause a rupture. It is also true that a sudden blow or fall may produce it.

Too often the victim of rupture neglects the condition. He may resort to the use of a truss, belt or other apliance recommended for this condition. But most physicians now agree that a truss will never heal a rupture. In fact, many surgeons believe that harm may be done by wearing a truss.

Neglect of a rupture is dangerous. The danger lies in the fact that occasionally a small loop of intestine may slip into the hernia sac. It may be pinched by the contracting muscles. When this occurs the condition is spoken of as a "strangulated hernia." This is a serious condition and requires immediate attention, even an operation.

Do not fear the operation for hernia. It is simple and when successfully performed insures the patient a complete and permanent cure. In many instances the operation is performed under local anesthesia. This eliminates nausea and vomiting, so common after general anesthesia.

The child unfortunate enough to have rupture should not be permitted to carry that handicap through life. The operation can be performed as early as the fifth year. Successful results are more generally obtained when the operation is done early. Failure to correct this defect at an early age prevents the child from participating in interesting and beneficial sports. In addition, it is a real menace to the welfare of the young sufferer.

No one will deny that wearing a truss is both cumbersome and undesirable. Since it is of so little value it is wise to consider an operation for the radical cure of the rupture. Much benefit is claimed for the so-called "injection" method. The form of procedure should be decided by your physician.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Better look after arms now. Bimeby summer will be gone; freckles won't look very well, if they ever do, which is doubtful.

Rub the skin surface with a cut lemon. While it is still moist get busy with the cold cream jar. There you have the beginning of a bleaching pack, which is finished up by sprinkling on almond meal and patting it in. The next step is a winding round of steaming hot towels. A perfectly priceless and heavenly arm beautifier.

One rule the reducing heavyweight must keep in mind; no nibbling between meals. If hunger pangs start up to bother her, she should do some breathing exercises, drink a glass of water. Sweet sauces and desserts, gravies, rich cream and butter are her enemies.

The grocer and butcher have plenty to offer her in the way of appetizing food—green salads, vegetables that grow above ground, meats that are lean. Buttermilk is refreshing, won't put on suet cushions.

When brushing the teeth place the brush lightly at the roots, roll the bristles downward. This rolling motion means that the sides of the teeth will be scoured; they seldom get their proper share of attention.

Get a rubber toothbrush and massage the gums. Or, push your finger tips around them. Don't take a chance on tartar gathering. It is a menace. Go to the dentist twice a year, have him get busy with his little picks and axes. Without sound, white teeth there's no chance of lining up in the beauty parade.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Don't Write

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

May I ask your kind assistance in composing a letter to a man who was kind enough to use his influence on my behalf? About four months ago he introduced my application to the head of a firm in the city, in the hope of my getting a position. I have been sick for some time since, and if he called, I did not get the message.

I do not want to appear bold or a nuisance, though I am very much in need of work, but I would like to know how he was received even if I did not have any luck. READER.

I am not sure but that it wouldn't be kinder of you not to write this letter. Don't you think that it might embarrass him?

If there had been any good news for you, any favorable reaction to his request, he would of course have communicated it to you.

Of course, I grant you that it would have been nicer if he had written you or told you that there was no possibility of having a position with that firm. But since he didn't, I don't think that you should force him to do what he apparently didn't want to do. I don't wish in the least possible way to be unkind, but I do think that your writing this letter would be a bit in the form of a "nuisance," which you say you don't wish to be.

I feel that if you should write this letter you might perhaps foil any further attempts that this man might make on your behalf.

Signatures

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a married woman and would like to know what is the proper way to sign my name in a note to a teacher, to a friend and a business concern? F.

Your letter to me was perfectly signed:

Sincerely yours,
Mary Seaman
(Mrs. Frank Seaman)

You might use the surname of your maiden name in your indirect signature, (Mary Smith Seaman), but it is just as correct to omit it if you wish to.

And this is the correct signature for you to use when you are writing to a teacher or to anyone who needs to be informed of your formal married name.

To a close friend you would sign only your first name. To an acquaintance or a not-so-close friend, you would sign your letters:

Very sincerely yours,
Mary Seaman
or
Mary Smith Seaman

But again, if there is any doubt that the person does not know your formal married name, you should enclose this in parenthesis under and to the left of your indirect signature, as you did in your letter to me.

A business or professional letter is signed:

Very truly yours,
Mary Seaman
(Mrs. Frank Seaman)

And your checks should be signed either Mary Seaman or Mary Smith Seaman.

Oakmont Stars, Conquerors of Highland, Defending Champ, In West Penn Golf Team Matches

The Highland Country Club golf team was dethroned as Western Pennsylvania team champion by the Oakmont stars in the matches played over three courses yesterday. Oakmont, which entered the finals to be played next Tuesday, won over Highland and Stanton Heights over the Fox Chapel layout. Oakmont will compete against Shannopin and South Hills for the title. Shannopin triumphed over St. Clair and Churchill Valley, while South Hills eliminated Greensburg and the Pittsburgh Field Club.

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Tigers Good For Years. More Pennants Possible. May Equal Former Mark.

Dodger Hurlers Fading. Deliberate Turf Losing. Chance Makes Champion.

In their previous occupancy of the American League championship throne, the Tigers won three pennants in succession. That was done in 1907-08-09. If, as the complexion of the race continues strongly to indicate will be the outcome, the Bengals finish in front this year, they will stand a better-than-average chance of equaling or approaching that record of a quarter century ago. For the club in the main is a young one that should be good for a long time without having to be made over to any great extent.

Goose Goslin

If Goose Goslin, nearing 33 as the oldest of the regulars, and whose steady hitting has been an important part of the offensive, can keep going for a couple more years, the management won't have to do much worrying about the remainder of the lineup. Manager Cochrane and Gehringer, each 31, are the oldest of the rest outside of the pitching department. Greenberg is 23, Owen 26, Rogell 29. Of the outfielders, Walker, White and Fox are 25. Among the pitchers, Marberry is almost 35, Crowder is 33, Sorrell is 32 and Hogsett is 31, but the others are under 30. Rowe, the star of the staff, is only 22, Auker 23, Bridges 28, Hamlin 28 and Fischer 29.

Rowe will be even a better pitcher than at present, as no hurler can learn it in only 40 major league games. Players like Greenberg, Owen, White and Fox also will improve. The greater part of the club will be better by reason of added experience, while the Yankees and Senators are on the decline. After the Tigers have stowed away the 1934 pennant, which they appear certain to do next month, they will be in a good spot to win one or two more, unless the Red Sox or Indians add a lot of strength in the meantime.

RED MANAGERIAL JOB REJECTED BY VITT

As manager of the Cincinnati club, Charley Dressen is said to have a contract covering the seasons of 1935 and 1936. If that is true—though you can take it from Bob O'Farrell that long-term pacts in Redland don't mean a thing—baseball men on the Pacific Coast declare that the Red owners must have changed their minds on the point. For according to the westerners, it was the refusal of the Cincinnati magnates to consent to such a contract that kept O'Farrell's successor from being Oscar Vitt, instead of Dressen.

California reports say that Vitt, now manager of the Hollywood club in the Coast League, was Cincinnati's first choice and was all set to take over the managership of the Reds until he and Larry MacPhail talked over contract terms. Oscar wanted a two-year agreement exclusive of the remainder of the 1934 season, and turned down the job when MacPhail offered only a one-year contract. Vitt says it would have taken him two years to build the Reds into any kind of team, adding that when and if he ever gets a chance to manage a big league club he wants half a chance to make good.

LAST TRIP FOR THREE DODGER PITCHERS

Three veteran members of the Brooklyn pitching staff who hurled here this week probably will be missing when the Dodgers make their next appearance in Pittsburgh in the spring of 1935. They are Owen Carroll, Watson Clark and Tom Zachary. There is little doubt that Zachary is serving his final season in the majors, and the present Western trip may be the last for Carroll and Clark also. The fate of the last named two depends on what they show during the tour, and the chances appear to be against their displaying enough of their old ability to earn new contracts.

Owen Carroll

Carroll, serving his tenth season as a professional, never has flashed the stuff he possessed at Holy Cross, where he won 51 games against two defeats, losing only to Princeton, 1 to 0, and to Harvard, 2 to 0 in 14 innings. Baseball men think he pitched too hard and often there. Owen has been a fair pitcher in the majors at times, but the present season has been his poorest and it is unlikely he will be in the big show next year, unless perchanse he gives up pitching and turns himself into an infielder. Clark started to sag after a strenuous season in 1930, when he started, relieved or did bullpen duty 19 times over a stretch of 21 days. Another year of hard work in 1932, when he won 20 games, left him in poor shape again, and he hasn't been the same pitcher since.

STARTING HORSES THAT HAVE NO CHANCE

OAKMONT TEAM MAKES STRONG TITLE BID

By TOM BIRKS

Members of Duquesne Council, Knights of Columbus, are at Churchill Valley today battling the course's tough par. According to Al Kenney, chairman of the golf committee, almost 100 members will compete for the prizes.

Assisting Kenney are Carl Eichenlaub, William J. Conwell, Tim O'Shea, Dr. Joe Nicci, Chris Hoffmann, Jim Carey, Eddie Kelly and Leo Blank. A dinner will be held this evening.

CHAMPIONS BOW

The reign of the Highland Country Club men's team as Western Pennsylvania champion came to an abrupt close yesterday at Fox Chapel as the Oakmont squad, a strong mixture of veterans and younger players, piled up 18 points against 12½ for the defending champions and 5½ for Stanton Heights. Highland held the title in 1933 and 1932.

In the championship final scheduled for next week, Oakmont will meet South Hills, which came through yesterday at Oakmont, and Shannopin, winner of the tests played over the Allegheny Country Club course.

South Hills entered the final round by virtue of victories over the Field Club and Greensburg teams, the final points being South Hills 19, Field Club 13½ and Greensburgh, 3½.

Shannopin scored 20 points to defeat St. Clair with 14, and Churchill Valley with two.

Things were amiss with the plans of the Highland team, only seven players being present. This automatically cost three points. Of course, this would not have been enough to have defeated Oakmont, but it might have changed the setup. In the Scotch alternate play in the morning, Dick Boucek did not have a partner, so he watched from the side lines. The Oakmonters turned up with a powerful team that just ploughed its way through the opposition.

Claude McKee added zest to South Hills' victory at Oakmont by scoring an ace on the 253-yard No. 8 hole. He used a full wood, the ball landing short of the pin and rolling in.

OAKMONT POWERFUL

George H. Flinn Jr., Ray Babcock, Billy Marks, I. W. Danforth, Dr. Ralston, Tom Jamison, Jim Marks Jr., and H. C. Fownes II, scored six points in the morning, and 12 in the afternoon.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: 45,000,000 AMERICANS WERE NAMED AFTER A TREE—The 45,000,000 Americans are inhabitants of Brazil, whose area of 3,285,000 square miles makes it second only to Canada as the largest country in the western hemisphere. Brazil is larger than the United States, and is 65 times as large as England. All this tremendous territory and its 45,000,000 inhabitants were named after the Brasil tree (Caesalpinia echinata) from whose wood dyers obtain a heavy red dye. The wood is called Brazil wood from the Portuguese word "braza," meaning "a live coal." The tree was found growing in what is now Brazil soon after the discovery of the New World. When a specimen of the wood was presented to King Manuel the Fortunate of Portugal, the King named the new territory "terra de Brazil" (the land of Brazil wood) and Brazil it has remained to this day. A PUTOUT WITHOUT TOUCHING THE BALL—The question is asked: "Can a ball player get two unassisted putouts in one inning handling the ball only once?" And the answer is "Yes." In the Detroit-St. Louis game of July 4, 1932, Burns, of the St. Louis team, tried to catch a foul, but the ball was snatched by a spectator who literally took the ball from Burns' glove. Burns, playing first base, then put out Gehringer and received credit for two putouts, though he touched the ball only once.

VET HOPEFUL OF WINNING 20 GAMES

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

In the Spring the rookie's fancy
Makes him sure that he's a won;
When the April skies are balmy
He is balmy, too—and how!
Just a great fair weather pitcher
Who can win a few at times—
But when August's sun is beating
Lay your dough on Hoyt or Grimes.

Yes, folks, the August drive stops many of the kids in baseball, but veterans like Burleigh Grimes and Waite Hoyt appear to have a reserve left, despite their many years of pitching. The spitball vet has pitched some great ball since he returned to the Pirates and Grimes told Manager Traynor today he was ready to tackle the Phillies, who opened a three-game series with the Pirates this afternoon.

Grimes, by the way, is feeling so good he envisions a big season for next year. Commenting on his personal status, Burleigh stated yesterday:

"Don't be astonished if I win 15 or 20 games next season."

GRIMES CONFIDENT

Grimes spoke as though he meant what he was saying. He predicted when he came back to the Buccos that after he had won back his control he would be able to help and he then proceeded to rip off two of the most sensational games of the season at Forbes Field.

Grimes says his perfect condition is due to the beneficial effects of an operation for appendicitis and another inward ailment which he underwent more than a year ago.

Manager Jimmy Wilson's Quakers have not been doing so well in the East, yet the Phearless Phils are the sort of a club that may rise up and smack you on a moment's notice. As long as they have a couple of birds like Dick Bartell they are dangerous.

PRO NET PLAY FOLLOWS DOPE

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Play in the national professional tennis championship tournament went as expected yesterday, with Bruce Barnes, Austin, Tex.; Paul Heston, Washington, D. C., and Charles Wood, of Bernardsville, N. J., moving into the quarter-finals of the singles after brisk battles.

Barnes eliminated Ernest Kuhn, of New York, 6-3, 6-0, 6-4, the struggle being much closer than the score indicates. Kuhn fought Barnes to deuce in many games, but the latter's experience and steadiness carried him through. After Barnes took a 3-0 lead in the third set, Kuhn rallied to take the next four games.

To the Sports Editor:

All that remains to make that story from New Orleans complete is to have Huey Long issue a call for volunteers for his army. That thing down in Louisiana is one of those things people talk about but don't know much about. Just ask anybody you meet. They have read the headlines, but not the stories under the headlines. They know there is some kind of a war down there, but they are not sure what kind. We have had a lot of things happen in our history, but it remained for Long to start a "war" within a state. Although the Gabbel Cycles, of New Kensington were crowned intermediate division champions of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament at Greenlee Field in the first game of a double-header yesterday, the game between the Campbell Shamrocks of the East End, and the Commercial Garage team, of the Hill district, was postponed until tomorrow because of a heavy downpour which followed the Gabbel Cycles-New Kensington Merchants contest. The senior contest will begin at 6 o'clock.

Rain checks for the Campbell Shamrock-Commercial Garage game will not be honored. The ticket sale for tomorrow's conflict will be continued at the lobby in the Sun-Telegraph Building and at the Downtown office at Fifth avenue and Market street. Tickets can be purchased for the nominal sum of 25 cents. Players who are registered in the tournament may obtain tickets for 10 cents at this office.

CYCLES WIN

The Gabbel Cycles defeated the New Kensington Merchants, 6 to 1, to win the intermediate division championship. The champions took the lead in the first inning when they scored three runs. Lou Marino walked, reached second on an error and advanced to third on a fly to the outfield. He scored when Raljack sent a long fly to left field. Rushnock followed with a base hit and he tallied when Roxie Belli hit a long home run to left field.

Manager Sam Salvatore's Cycles increased their margin in the sixth canto. Marino led off with a double, advanced on a outfield fly and scored the fourth run for the Cycles on another fly to the outfield. J. Walsh opened the sixth inning with the first hit of the game for the losers. He was forced out at second by F. Walsh, who went to second on a fly to left field and scored on Jules Szuch's long fly to center field.

VICTORS STAGE RALLY

The Gabbels put on a last inning rally to score two runs. Belli tripled to left and scored on Shoupe's single. Sustham hit into a double play, but Shortstop Goodwin followed with a three bagger to right-center and carried across the last marker of the game when C. Lapato fumbled Pitcher Rice's grounder. U. S. Yacht Keeps Classic Canada Cup

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Aided by bewildering vagaries of weather, Skipper Wilmot Castle, of the Conewago came from behind yesterday and sailed the Rochester Yacht Club Canada's Cup defender to an overwhelming and third straight victory over the Invader II, of Canada, and retained for the United States the famous fresh water yacht racing trophy.

At the helm of the Invader, Skipper Tom Wade kept the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, of Toronto, challenger in front of the Conewago until the end of the fourth leg of the first round of the 21-mile triangular course, when the wind failed suddenly.

The Conewago got the break and made the marker ahead of the Canadian and sailed down the fifth leg on the tail end of the breeze while the Invader's sails flapped for lack of wind.

SOPWITH YACHT WINS RESPECT

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Speculation over the prospects of a British victory in the international America's Cup yacht races next month today overshadowed the second trial race between the American sloops Rainbow and Yankee to determine a defender for the cup.

Thomas Octave Murdoch Sopwith, who is seeking to wrest the trophy from American skippers, brought out his all-steel Endeavour yesterday and in an informal race with the American Rainbow and Weetamoe threw a scare into native yachtsmen's hopes of retaining possession of the cup.

Five minutes after Weetamoe and Rainbow crossed the starting line in the first of a series of 30-mile final trails for defense nomination, Sopwith's Endeavour started out in pursuit of the American craft and followed them almost to the windward mark, 15 miles distant.

When Endeavour eased the sheets a mile or so to the leeward of the halfway mark she was two minutes astern of Weetamoe and did not cut Rainbow's lead any, although Rainbow did not gain appreciably on her.

It was the unanimous opinion of expert observers that, win or lose, the Eendeavour will give the American defender a terrific fight.

In today's trial race the Yankee, of Boston, high liner of the current America's Cup defensive fleet, met Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow, which yesterday defeated Weetamoe.

Ambassadors Seek To Clinch Series

The Ambassadors won the first tilt, played Monday evening.

Two games are carded in the City League, Homewood meeting the J. J. Vaughans on the Salt Works grounds and Mt. Oliver engaging Immaculate Heart on the West Penn Park diamond.

MISS VAN WIE WINNER OF TOURNEY

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Although the battle for the women's national golf championship is still more than a month away, the field can start worrying over its big job of toppling Virginia Van Wie from her throne.

Since she captured the national title for the second successive time last year, the Chicago girl has won two sectional championships. In February she crushed Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City, 3 and 4, and in the South Atlantic yesterday, she defeated Mrs. Hill, her closest rival, by 10 shots in the 72-hole Western Derby. She scored 323 for the 72-hole test.

Miss Van Wie, who believes too much tournament golf makes a player's game stale, has adopted a "loafing" policy from a competitive standpoint since her triumph over Helen Hicks in the national finals at Exmoor. Yet, she is displaying almost perfect golf. She says:

"I'm playing fairly well, but I plan to get intensive training from Ernest Jones, the Long Island pro who has taught me for several years, before defending my title at Whitemarsh."

Miss Van Wie figures the 1934 championship will be one of the hardest of all to win with 64 in the field and two match play rounds instead of one on the first day. Asked about Glenna Collett Vare, she replied:

"I don't know about Glenna. Maybe she's just entering again for sports sake. But if she wants to win that title bad enough, she can do it. None of us can quite match Glenna, you know."

Injury May Force Merlin to Retire

DEAUVILLE, France, Aug. 23.—(INS.)—Andre Merlin, French Davis Cup star, may never play tournament tennis again, owing to the injury of his knee in a motorcycle accident, it became known today.

Merlin has a deep gash in his knee and the doctors report an operation is necessary.

GIANTS GET GUARD

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—The New York Giants, of the National Professional Football League, have announced the signing of George Rosemark, 205 pound guard of the Marquette University team last fall, and the sale to Cincinnati of Tiny Feather, former Kansas Aggie back.

WOMEN STARS WIN

ST. PAUL, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Miss Helen Germain, New York, Mrs. Katherine Rose and Mrs. Andrew Nemec, of Cleveland, advanced to the semi-finals of the state women's singles tennis tournament at the St. Paul Tennis Club yesterday.

CHILLYSAUCE

In his interesting discussion over the Sun-Telegraph's station WCAE last night, Waite Hoyt, leading pitcher on the Pirate squad, took occasion to suggest that the players of the major leagues give some kind of an outward sign of their appreciation to Babe Ruth as an acknowledgment for what the Babe has done for baseball and the players.

Hoyt thinks a fitting that Ruth should receive a testimonial of some sort from his diamond comrades when the retires permanently. Waite gave figures to show what Babe meant at the gate and rightfully asserted that most of the diamond athletes swung big salaries were indebted to Babe for his drawing power.

Waite was with the Yanks when they were winning 10 pennants and he saw Babe hurl something like 600 homers. He has a deep sentimental side as far as the home-run king is concerned. Hoyt did not mention it last night, but he thinks it would be quite nice if the players of the two major leagues would stage a grand feast in honor of Ruth at the end of the season.

The former Yankee pitcher gave some illuminating information on the rank and file of the Detroit Tigers who seem to be driving toward the flag pennant for Detroit in 25 years. Waite, however, believes the Giants would be at the Tigers in a world series shindig.

There was nothing compromising in Hoyt's tone when he was asked whether there was any real difference in the batting skill of the great hitters of the American League as compared with those of the National. There is a big difference, he says, in favor of the American League sluggers. They are much more damaging in their vast act, he says.

Larry French will accompany Paul Carle, playground director at Gardner Park Tony Hill tonight, where he will entertain thousands of children of the neighborhood.

Jack Quinn, patriarch of pitchers and hero of countless battles in the big show, will pitch against the Homestead Grays tonight at West Newton, Pa., the veteran to share in the same town where he started as a pitcher back in 1909.

—CHILLY DOYLE.

BIRDS CAPTURE SIX IN ROW

Huntington's victory march toward the Mid-Atlantic League pinnacle now filled by Zanesville has reached the six-straight stage.

But, even with a 7-2 victory over Dayton last night, the Red Birds failed to cut into the Greys' seven-game lead, inasmuch as the Greys were pounding out a 10-4 win over Springfield.

The Zanesville-Springfield contest started out as a pitching duel and ended in a slugfest. Zoeller accounted for three Pirate runs as he got to pitcher Cumberland for a home run in the seventh inning with two on.

Johnstown advanced to third place, ousting Dayton with a dual victory over the Charleston Senators, taking the first game, 6-4, and the second, 8-6. In the nightcap, Andrefski hit a homer with two on for the Jawns.

Cy Rosenthal's triple with the bases loaded in the sixth inning aided Beckley to an 8-2 triumph over the Wheeling Stogies, marking the Black Knights' second consecutive victory in the Panhandle.

MAX TO PERMIT 'PUBLIC' TO PICK CAREER

LAKE TAHOE, Cal., Aug. 23.—(INS.)—Max Baer may become chief among box-fight chairmen, he decided the ring without defending his title and turning his undivided attention to the stage and screen.

The gorgeous Maxie now taking a year here, indicated that he would leave it to his public to decide whether he should box or act, he said.

"It's all up to the public what I do."

Max himself is undecided whether he's a better actor or fighter.

The champion's immediate future will be devoted to cradling the boards. About September 10 he will start a Pacific Coast tour in a singing and dancing number at Portland, Ore. He will swing up to Seattle and then down the coast to Hollywood where the first part of October he will start on another motion picture.

AMERICAN LEAGUE HURLERS IN SPOTLIGHT

GOMEZ PITCHES SHUTOUT OVER CLEVELAND

Associated Press.

Although the American League is known as a "hitters' league," the pitchers seem to be deciding a lot of important things, too.

Today the fans had before them such notable examples as the Yankee southpaw Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, with his twenty-first victory of the year won with a two-hit shutout, Wes Ferrell, of Boston, with his twelfth triumph in 14 trials and a couple of others who did first-class jobs of flinging yesterday.

GOMEZ HURLS SHUTOUT

Gomez, leading hurler of the junior loop, brought the Yanks to a 9 to 0 victory over Cleveland in the first half of a double-header and enabled them to gain an even break for the day. The victory put him on even terms with Dizzy Dean, National League leader, in total games won.

The second contest was a different story as the Indians smashed three of New York's "second division" pitchers, Jimmy Deshong, Johnny Murphy and Johnny Broaca for 14 hits, including three homers, and won, 10 to 4.

The split was enough to give the Yanks a half-game gain on the Tigers in the pennant race, as Earl Whitehill led the Senators to a 7-to-5 victory over Detroit.

Ferrell, whose hitting ability is second only to his pitching, not only limited the White Sox to seven hits, but produced a 3-to-2 10-inning victory with his bat. He clouted two home runs, one in the eighth to tie the score, and another in the tenth to win.

DIETRICH VICTOR

Bill Dietrich, of the Athletics, turned in another of the day's fine flinging performances when he shut out the Browns with eight hits to win, 2 to 0. Bruce Campbell made just half the Brownie hits.

The National League schedule was a complete blank for the day, paving the way for a grand opening today of a "crucial" test for the league-leading Giants. The New Yorkers open a three-game series today against the third-place Cardinals and the Dean brothers, who have beaten them eight times running, then go on for four games against Chicago's second-place Cubs.

Water Polo Title Tilt Carded Sunday

The Duquesne Dolphins and the Duquesne Monongahelas are to clash for the Senior Allegheny Mountain Association water polo championship at the Willows Pool, Oakmont, at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Both teams are coached by Joe Rosenal, of the Duquesne Library Club, who plans to enter a team in the national championships. The program is to include canoe tilting and acrobatic high diving.

Lenore Kight, Johanna Gorman and Louise Clark are to appear in exhibition swims, and Bob McTiernan, Paul Caldwell and Jack Stover, fancy divers, will perform on the springboard at the Pittsburgh Field Club Sunday afternoon.

M'CLOY'S BAT AIDS TUBERS

McKeesport's Little Bucs, of the Penn State Association, put together 14 safe hits for 10 runs last evening while Schmidt kept Monessen's 10 safeties well scattered and the Bucs won, 10 to 1, to keep pace with the league-leading Greensburg Redwings.

McCloy, McKeesport third sacker, collected four hits, including a trio of doubles.

Charleroi and Jeannette divided a doubleheader at Charleroi. In the first tilt the home team scored in the ninth inning to win, 2 to 1, as Compton and Lee staged a hurlers' battle, and in the second Jeannette tallied twice in the fourth, to win, 3 to 2.

Darkness and an impending storm halted the Greensburg-Washington game at the end of the sixth inning, with Greensburg out in front, 5 to 2. Washington got only three hits and Greensburg four during the abbreviated contest.

St. Charles Horse Paces 2:01¾-Mile

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Stepping his third heat mile in 2:01¾, Phil Cochata, entered by E. J. Baker, of St. Charles, made the best time of the Grand Circuit meet at the Illinois State Fair this week to take the 2:15 class pace. The son of The Philistine won in straight heats, taking the first in 2:02.

Straight heat victories were scored in the first four events, the 2:13 pace going to Lady Vonian, driven by H. Parshall for J. E. Crosbie, of Tulsa, Okla.

Everytime the name of George Lott appears in the public prints, it recalls this department's first look-see at the now famous Davis Cup star . . . When George was merely an up and coming tenniser and when Bill Tilden ruled the roost . . . It's a pretty good tale of (A) George's pants . . . (B) Tilden's peace of mind . . . And (C) a piece of rope . . . For once, the great Tilden wound up on the short end and for once, his bluster failed to get him to first base against a pair of kids.

Bill Tilden

George Lott

It was back in, let's see . . .

1925, in Cleveland, on the occasion of the final round of the inter-city doubles championships . . . Tilden and his partner, Neil Sullivan, were opposing Lott and George O'Connell, of Chicago . . . With O'Connell even younger than the then youthful Lott . . . Bill and Neil took the first set, but, playing to Sullivan's weak backhand, the Chicago Georges won the second . . . Tilden managed to win the third for his side, but the youngsters came back to take the fourth.

They were battling along on even terms in the fifth and deciding session and the Chicago kids were getting pretty tired . . . They pulled up even at four games apiece, when suddenly Lott dropped his racquet and grabbed for his trousers . . . His belt had broken and he was in danger of joining the "shorts" league pronto . . . There was nothing to do but stop the match while George found another belt . . . He couldn't locate one to fit, so he grabbed a piece of rope as a substitute . . . The rest gave O'Connell a chance to recuperate some of his powers and so infuriated Tilden that he wasn't worth a nickel from then on . . . And Lott and his partner went on to win the title, their first major triumph.

Bob Reagan, former Duquesne and Villanova line coach, attended the ball game at Forbes Field Tuesday . . . He's a chap who should be head-coaching somewhere . . . Watch West Virginia Wesleyan's Barnum go to town this fall . . . He's as good a backfield man as there is in the district . . . Jack Shea, who gets around, reports that West Virginia is going to have a pretty tough eleven this fall. . . . The veterans on Pitt's varsity squad who have attended previous training sessions at Camp Hamilton, Windber, won't know the old place this fall . . . its practically been done over . . . which is just what will be done to the Pitt ball club.—JESS CARVER.

Pittsburgher Wins In Chess Tourney

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Requiring more than nine hours to play two games, Nathan Rubin, of Detroit, defeated L. T. Debearn, of that city by one win and one draw to enter the semi-finals of the eighth annual tournament of the American Checker Association.

One game, which required six hours, nine minutes, is believed to be the second longest in the history of recognized tournament play.

Charles W. Young, of Pittsburgh, finished in eleventh place and won $25 and Edward L. Ebert, of Pittsburgh, took first place in the minor tourney.

The Springfield (Mass.) American Legion team has decided to withdraw from the sectional eliminations in Gastonia, N. YANKEES LOSE BILL DICKEY

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—The New York Yankees' chances of overtaking the Detroit Tigers in the American League pennant race received a setback today when it was announced that Catcher Bill Dickey would be out of the lineup for a week.

Dickey suffered a compound dislocation of the second finger of his throwing hand yesterday while stopping a foul tip off Mel Harder's bat in the ninth inning of the second game of the double-header with the Cleveland Indians. Arndt Jorgens will do the back-stopping in Dickey's absence.

The scores were 6-4, 6-0.

DUNLAP LAUDS MATCH PLAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Some of the survivors of Tuesday's nation-wide sectional qualifying tests for the national amateur golf championship may hold some fears about the all-match play title tournament, but not so with George Terry Dunlap, Jr., the reigning king.

When the United States Golf Association announced the change from a championship qualifying round to all two-man warfare—patterned along the lines of the British amateur—Dunlap raised an eyebrow and heaved a sigh of relief. He remarked:

"That was a grand shift. It's a break for me because I have a horror of qualifying rounds. I prefer match play."

Dunlap barely got into the qualifying fold at Cincinnati last year when he ascended the amateur throne. He was locked in a tie with a dozen other title-seekers for the last eight places in the championship group of 32.

Dunlap doesn't think the shift enhances his chance of repeating. He rates himself a 100 to 1 shot and explains by pointing to the flock of threatening stars such as W. Lawson Little, Jr., the British amateur titleholder; Johnny Fischer, Johnny Goodman, Jack Westland and Francis Ouimet.

Emilio Aguinaldo's Capture

A.G. hearing of it, said that the leader be sent to him personally.

Segismundo greeted himself and the correspondent in headquarters and the latter had an informal chat with him. Conditions at Palanan, the returned related, made the great Aguinaldo's position almost impregnable from the outside, or from within, for that matter.

Aguinaldo, with several officers of his staff and an escort of about 50 uniformed and well-armed men, had been there for several months. The chief had been in constant communication with his various subordinates by messengers. Most of the soldiers of his escort and the residents of the town itself were unaware of Aguinaldo's identity. He was known only as "Capt. Emilio," a subordinate officer of the insurrection.

Col. Funston, deeply impressed by Segismundo's story, was still a bit doubtful he might be mistaken about Aguinaldo, but attention was centered on the correspondence. After hours of concentrated effort, the key was finally discovered in the Tagalog tongue of the islands and the mysterious messages unraveled.

Wildly enthusiastic, Col. Funston and his aides were convinced of the authenticity of the correspondence, which was found to include direct orders from Aguinaldo to his subordinates. The letter to his cousin proved to be Aguinaldo's undoing.

This message instructed Baldomero Aguinaldo, then in command of insurgent bands operating in Cavite province, just south of Manila, to proceed at once to the "center of Luzon," and, using the communication as his authority, to supersede in command Jose Alejandrino, who evidently was not giving satisfactory service. As soon as he had established himself, Baldomero was instructed to direct his subordinates — Lacuna, Mascardo, Simon and Pablo Tecson and several others—to send detachments of men aggregating about 400 to the big chief's stronghold.

But the thing that worried Col. Funston was how to use the information about Aguinaldo to the best advantage. Nothing short of actual capture of the insurgent chieftain was to be desired, but how to go about it was the problem.

IMPERSONATE TAGALOGS

A bold plan to accompany a detachment of native soldiers, loyal to the American cause but disguised as insurrectionists, and to palm them off on the eagle-eyed Aguinaldo lookouts as reinforcements from Lacuna, was decided on as the only scheme.

It took a great deal of careful planning and meant finally untold hardships on the five American officers who went along to assume command of the expedition, but who had to travel as "prisoners of war" who had fallen into the hands of the native force of reinforcements.

Finally securing the approval of Gen. Lloyd Wheaton, the department commander, Col. Funston began putting his plan into operation. Choosing as his aides Capt. R. T. Hazzard, 11th U. S. Volunteer Cavalry, and his brother, Lieut. O. P. M. Hazzard, of the same regiment; Capt. Harry W. Newton, of 24th U. S. Volunteer Infantry, and his own efficient aide, Lieut. B. J. Mitchell, Col. Funston began laying with elaborate care details of the plot to trap the wily Aguinaldo.

The native force, it was planned, would impersonate Tagalogs, for it was from these natives that Lacuna's band of insurgents had been recruited.

Loyal Macabebes, chosen for their ability to speak the Tagalog lingo and loyalty to the American cause, numbered 81 men. With supplies together with the Macabebes and the five white officers they were put aboard the gunboat Vicksburg under command of E. B. Barry.

Secretly, quietly, the night of March 6, 1901, the boat slipped to sea. There, no longer need for secrecy, Col. Funston and his officers immediately took the native troops in hand for intensive drilling.

They had to repeat over and over to themselves and to each other the story their white officers drilled into them. They were to say to the enemy when they met them that they had been part of the Lacuna forces; that sometime in February they had started on the march northward and on this part of their journey they had encountered a party of 10 Americans.

After a brief fight, their story ran, they killed two and wounded three of the Americans and the remaining five had surrendered. Col. Funston and his officers were to pass themselves off as those five prisoners.

Messages were prepared on some Lacuna's captured stationery to Aguinaldo. One letter, from Lacunato his insurgent chieftain, acknowledged receipt of the orders sent by Segismundo. The message contained a message of thanks to Aguinaldo for his advancement of Lacuna to the rank of general and offered the troops bearing the message as reinforcements to the chief's personal troops.

Everything ready the party finally landed on the coast in the Vicksburg's surf boats the morning of March 14. Col. Funston and his fellow officers were dressed in the ragged uniforms of American privates. The Macabebes looked every inch the part of the native force they pretended to be.

Then, began the march down the coast. The native town of Casiguran lay immediately ahead. Similating the rigors of a hard journey across the mountains, the party discarded all but absolutely necessary rations, mainly rice and water. A message was prepared for the Presidente of Casiguran, telling him of the approach of the insurgent pretenders and a guide requested to lead them into the village.

DISTURBING STONES

In the village they were greeted enthusiastically as insurgents. The white prisoners were locked up in the town dungeon and the "little macs" feted and feasted. Then, for the first time, the masquerade was almost given away when the Macabees representing white officers even under the ordered subterfuge, seemed to hesitate to accord them the treatment ordinarily due prisoners. However, with a good sound cussing from their native officers, the deception was successfully carried out by the troops.

Here in Casiguran, too, the expedition heard a story that upset them. It was supposed to be glad news of the arrival of fresh troops in the strong hold of Aguinaldo, but the Macabees and their officers were naturally somewhat worried. However, the story proved false, but it was another moment in the harrowing experiences of the party when a false word, or a misstep, would have spelled disaster.

Finally, several days later, the party again started towards Palanan. Food supplies were replenished at Casiguran, but because of the desire to push on toward their goal the expedition did not take full rations, depending on fish and food found along the route. It rained almost incessantly an entire week. The food, soaked through and through, became a soggy, fermenting mass.

The Macabebes scraped limpets from the rocks and gathered snails, which with small fish were stewed up with corn, making a revolting mass. However, they ate and it kept them alive.

They were naturally weak, but they kept going. Nine days after leaving the Vicksburg they were met at the Aguinaldo outposts by Negritos. Their plight was easy to see. They were fed and Aguinaldo sent out an expedition with additional supplies to them.

The expedition which brought the food brought also instructions from the insurgent chieftain that the reinforcement troops were to advance into Palanan, but they were to leave their "prisoners." A guard of 10 was sent from Palanan to take the "prisoners" in charge.

Here, another piece of strategy by Col. Funston and his fellow officers stood them in good stead and once more they pulled the wool over the Tagalos' eyes.

THE CAPTURE

Instead of waiting for the guard, the main body of Macabebes in charge of a faithful sergeant, started to Palanan, leaving 10 of their own men to "guard" their "prisoners." They met the Palanan guard and told them the orders had been changed, the Tagalos were readily taken in and the expedition continued to Palanan. The "guard and the prisoners" followed a short distance behind.

In their weakened condition, the members of the expedition required six hours to traverse the seven miles into the village, about half-way to the Aguinaldo stronghold, the "prisoners" and their "guard" were almost surprised in the trail by another body of Aguinaldo troops, but they hid in the brush at the side of the trail and waited until the enemy had passed, then boldly pushed on. The main body of the expedition finally reached Palanan and was taken into the presence of the "dictator" who stood, fully armed, and surrounded by seven of his own officers, all armed. Outside Aguinaldo's office stood 50 smartly uniformed and armed insurgent soldiers, at attention to receive the reinforcements.

Segovia, a sergeant of the Macabebes, acted as leader of the newly arrived troops. With him was another native officer, Hilario. Hilario, addressing himself to Aguinaldo, began a relation of their trip from Lacunas headquarters and Segivia took his position near an open window. Seeing his trops all present, Segovia gave the signal, and the little "Macs" opened fire on the surprised guard of honor. It was a ragged volley and fired by excited men but it had its effect. Two men of the Aguinaldo escort fell dead and another was wounded.

Aguinaldo, hearing the shots, stepped to the window and called out:

"Stop that foolishness. Don't waste ammunition."

He thought the firing was from his own troops in recognition of the visitors.

Before he could turn, Hilario had grabbed him and thrown him under the table where he sat on him heavily. Orders had been given that Aginaldo at all costs, was to be taken alive, however, were not so easily surprised. Several reached their revolvers, but Segovia opened fire, hitting one three times and wounding another. The officers, realizing they were out numbered and further fighting useless, jumped from the windows and escaped by swimming the river.

When Col. Funston and his officers arrived they were met by one of the loyal Macs. His face beaming, as he reported:

"It is all right, we have him."

The Americans took Aguinaldo in charge and without further adventure returned to the coast with their captives, where they were met by the Vicksburg as prearranged.

Aguinaldo, the proud

CODE AUTHORITY MAY CONTROL MARKET

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The code authority of the investment bankers probably will be an important factor in whatever action the Securities and Exchange Commission may take to supervise over-the-counter markets.

The commission has found no definite approach to this problem yet, but it appears likely that the investment bankers with their code—characterized by officials as a fine job—may draw some of the task.

While no statistics are available to show the importance of these markets, one official believes they constitute 60 per cent of the security business done in New York. Of course, when that business is broken down, a large part of it is found to consist of small issues that may not be subject to regulation on the ground they are not interstate or not worth regulating simply because they are small.

The investment bankers' code is one of the most stringent regulatory documents under the NRA. It offers investment bankers an opportunity of registering with the code authority, and when subscribing to this registration the bankers must trade most carefully.

"Investment banker" is to some extent a misnomer, because many so classified are so small as not to come in the same classification with the large houses.

The code, however, gives an opportunity of at least listing the great many dealers in securities, and from there progressing toward regulation.

At present this market is virtually unregulated, with the result that investors have no information whatsoever of profits which dealers may receive, or of the value of their offerings.

GRUBB DEFENDS CURB NEED

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—The New York curb exchange has no intention of closing and surrendering its listed stocks to the "big board," E. Burd Grubb, president, stated in a press conference, adding that the exchange was going ahead with plans to register with the securities exchange commission.

Mr. Grubb said that recent rumors in the financial district, in view of the SEC ruling placing all listed stocks on an equal footing, That the curb market would transfer its list to the big board, were without foundation.

Commenting on the action of the directors of the Standard Oil Company, of Indiana in applying to the New York stock exchange for permission to take its stock from the curb to the big board, Mr. Grubb said that while the smaller exchange might lose a few issues, there were also indications that additional listings would more than make up for the loss. He said that bids now on file for memberships "considerably in excess" of the $18,500 paid last week for a seat, indicated that brokers continued to maintain their confidence in the curb market.

GOTHAM BANKS CUT INTEREST

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Two of the largest commercial banks in the city announced a reduction in interest rates on savings and thrift accounts today.

The Bank of Manhattan Company notified depositors that effective October 1, interest on special accounts will be 1½ per cent on amounts of $5,000 and less and ¾ of 1 per cent on amounts above $5,000 and not exceeding $15,000. The present rate is 2 per cent up to $5,000 and ¾ of 1 per cent up to $15,000.

The National City Bank, effective September 1, will pay 2 per cent on savings accounts up to $5,000 and 1 per cent in excess of $5,000. The current rate is 2 per cent on all such amounts.

Forbes

Dangers Analyzed. Plan Falls Short. Confusion Remains. Encourage Business.

By B. C. FORBES

WHAT COURSE will President Roosevelt seek to steer from now on?

Will he give "business some encouragement," or will he expand the sphere of government influence over every department of social and economic activity, perhaps after the model of the Russian experiment?

Mr. Forbes

How do intelligent Europeans answer these questions raised by them?

WHILE I WAS in Europe a few weeks ago, the Royal Bank of Scotland published in its July circular an article which reflects accurately, so far as I could gather, the judgment formed by many responsible Europeans who closely follow and keenly study developments here.

SINCE IT often is illuminating to "see ourselves as others see us," the following extracts may interest thoughtful American citizens:

"It is now a year and a half since the Roosevelt Administration took office and inaugurated the policies collectively designated as the 'New Deal.' In terms of the promises of the administration, the nation, which fell in enthusiastically behind the banner of the New Deal, should now be half-way on the road to a new and lasting recovery.

"Kaleidoscopic as have been the changes which Americans have witnessed in the economic scene during the past 18 months, the vision which confronts them is not that of the promised land, and the marchers, though in the main still trustful of their leader, are wondering as never before what is to be the outcome of it all.

"The one certain fact is that the outward and visible results of the New Deal have fallen far short of those which the administration colorfully presented to the imagination of Americans. 'Relief, recovery and reform' were the trinity of tasks to which the government directed its adventurous program.

"Most Americans would still accept these objects as entirely worthy of government endeavor, but an increasing number (judging by the growing volume of criticism of the administration's proposals) are finding themselves no longer able to endorse the specific interpretation placed upon them by President Roosevelt.

"Taken as a whole, the development of American economic conditions through the four phases of recovery, reform, relief and less relief, since the inauguration of President Roosevelt, leaves a distinct impression of accumulating confusion as between the various programs which have been initiated.

"The explanation of the reluctance of private enterprise to generate its own recovery is simple enough. All the familiar landmarks by which private business had climbed out of previous depressions were gone. The new directions of the legislature read strangely and were not always explicit at that.

"It is quite evident that the government cannot go on forever pumping relief expenditure into the system without setting up disastrous repercussions. The financial burden which is being accumulated is already colossal by any but war-time standards.

"There are no reliable indications yet that private enterprise is ready to take over and sustain business revival. . . .

"President Roosevelt can shorten the period of transition by giving business some encouragement to exercise its latent initiative. This would involve a truce to further experiment and, probably, also revision, or at least a more liberal interpretation, of some of the more restrictive clauses of the securities act, stock exchange act, national recovery act, and numerous other acts by which private enterprise is at present circumscribed.

"The alternative is to abandon the idea that business will recover of itself in any reasonable time and to accept full responsibility for the entire economic organization of the country. This would mean extending the sphere of government influence over every department of social and economic activity, perhaps after the model of the Russian experiment; what else it would involve is best left to the imagination.

"Despite his insistence on the need for social reconstruction, it is difficult to believe that a sovietized America is the President's ideal. He is still reputedly opposed to the currency inflation, which, almost certainly, would accompany such an experiment. Nor would he carry the majority of Americans very far with him along such a road.

"There is a popular cry for inflation. Will the President be able to resist the forces which he has released? Will the government be able to retire from the field of business before normal methods of financing its huge emergency expenditures break down?

"The answer depends partly on Mr. Roosevelt's power to retain his personal hold on the imagination of Americans."

DROUGHT MAY PROVE BOON TO BUSINESS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The official forecast of a billion dollar increase in farm income indicates that the net overall effect of the drought on business will not be harmful.

Mr. Rukeyser

In fact, if the dry spell is followed by normal weather for next crop, the drought may prove a blessing in disguise. It might well prove the means of attaining parity, and result in a maximum circulation of goods and services from city to country.

But of course there will be inequities within the farm group. A stricken farm family cannot thrive on the law of averages, but will need tangible federal relief. Relief payments, plus higher prices, will tend to boost total farm income.

PAYMENTS TO HELP

Louis H. Bean, economic advisor to the Secretary of Agriculture, in reply to my questions, said:

"The general impression here is that the rise in prices will be adequate to offset the reduction in volume so that the total farm income should be well maintained. In addition, of course, there will be benefit payments from the AAA which will bulk larger than those of last year and there will also be additional income from the relief purchases of livestock."

A penetrating analysis of the near-economic prospects for American farmers and for those who do business with them emphasized the subjoined point:

"The real question for you to consider is the effect of such a maldistribution of farm income as we are going to have this year. Will the areas that are going to profit from this situation as a result of their having crops at high prices buy enough more to offset the curtailed purchases in the drought-stricken areas? The chances are that by concentrating in the areas where incomes are being sustained and increased this year, those depended upon the farm market will be able to maintain their business this fall.

DISTRIBUTION PROBLEM

"There is, however, the problem of volume for some of the distributors next year. To what extent will their purchasing power be affected by the reduction in volume of grain and livestock to be handled? The railroads are, of course, now getting a larger volume of traffic due to the drought, which will be offset later by the smaller supplies available during the first half of 1935.

"The feed crop situation is, of course, so unprecedented that we have no real basis for determining the effect of such small feed crops and the lack of forage and the curtailment of livestock numbers. Some are inclined to think that the reduction in feed crops does not necessarily bring about anything like an equivalent reduction in livestock numbers, so that one needs to be on guard against being too pessimistic with regard to the probable curtailment in livestock production. We are, of course, going to have higher food prices next year due to higher prices for meats, cereals, and dairy products, but this should not lift the general cost of living by more than a few per cent."

Eccles Seen As Reserve Head

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—The name of Marriner S. Eccles came to the forefront alongside that of J. F. T. O'Connor today as a possible choice for governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

The White House indicated no choice had been made. Although O'Connor has been mentioned as a likely successor to Eugene R. Black, resigned, one official expressed the opinion Eccles would be named. He was without certain knowledge, however.

Eccles, who comes from Utah and is a special assistant to Secretary Morgenthau, is said to have "liberal" ideas about finance. O'Connor, a Californian and at present comptroller of the currency, is described as "more conservative."

Argentina Refuses Aid On Wheat Plan

LONDON, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Argentina and two or three European countries declined to give full support to new proposals for international regulations of wheat trade and production, an authoritative source said today.

The statement was made following a final reading of a six-page draft plan drawn up at this morning's session of the World Wheat Conference.

Although it was hoped the conference would adjourn tonight, a general discussion of the proposals which are being submitted to 21 governments may not be concluded until tomorrow.

Reservations made by Argentina and other countries, it was learned, prevented an agreement on export quotas and acreage reduction for at least the next two or three months.

The full conference met today after an adjournment since Monday, during which a sub-committee wrote a draft plan and copies of it were dispatched to the various capitals.

A general agreement was reached on some proposals, including one for a flexible quarterly export quota system, setting aside a reserve from the estimated world import demand before the annual quotas are alloted to the exporting nations.

CAPITAL FOUND SAFEST HERE

By JULIUS BERENS
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—I have already declared my opinion that England, with all its boasted revival, lacks attraction for capital as compared with the American dollar.

How, then, about the rest of Europe?

Take the more important nations.

France, for instance.

Here there is a struggle between inflation and deflation. No one can guess the outcome.

Prices are cruelly high in France. Not only for the American with his depreciated dollar but for the natives paying in francs.

OPPOSES INFLATION

Naturally there is a permanent and powerful bloc in France opposed to further depreciation. The bloc is made up of renter-owners, the pensioners, fixed-income possessors, and others who have passed through one inflation and fear another as much as a plague.

France, however, is no different from other countries. Its government finds increasing difficulty locating revenues to meet its bills. Taxes already are excessive. Foreign trade has suffered because of the high cost of the franc. Tourist trade which provided such a handsome annual revenue to France has been slashed to pieces, especially the American traffic.

You can get competent observers to say that France will swing further toward the left any day. The confussed internal political situation in the country hardly is conducive to complacency for the foreigner who might be tempted to ship and keep capital there.

Always, with or without good reason, there is talk or fear of another conflagration involving France.

Without going into other and involved details of the country's politico-social-economic affairs how can the American generate complete confidence in the franc as against the dollar?

ITALY UNCERTAIN

Can an American prefer Italy, perhaps?

In the first place, it is difficult to obtain complete facts about Italy. Censorship is rigid and determination of policies and activities rests solely with Mussolini. He has his hands full meeting the cost of the vast rebuilding program. This program incidentally should be allotted unlimited credit for bringing about a vast change in Italy, if the cost be disregarded.

But Italy, like most European countries, has no completely free money. The government has been forced to th eextreme of establishing virtually a capital levy on owners of securities.

The feeling is evident in many responsible quarters of Europe that Italy, too, may be facing a financial crisis. It is hardly the place for an American capitalist to favor over the dollar.

Germany naturally is out of the question as a capital-haven.

LOSES TOURISTS

Switzerland has been hard hit by curtailed tourist traffic. Frequently have inflationists urged a change in their money to equalize depreciation elsewhere. No one can with equanimity favor Swiss money over the dollar while the crisis there persists.

Neither in Switzerland nor in Holland do sufficient investment opportunities exist to take care of any huge inflow of foreign capital.

Nowhere in Europe is there freedom from fear of war, even if this fear subsides as each succeeding new crisis passes without major entanglements.

I was in Austria when the last outbreak occurred. I was just boarding the ship at Trieste, now Italian, when Dollfuss was shot.

Everybody aboard the ship, of half a dozen different nationalities, immediately began to outline the division of Europe in the inevitable war. Only the Americans were spectators in this game.

Even after cursory examination of the European situation, I prefer the dollar to their currencies.

WALL STREET CHEERED BY WASHINGTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Stocks were less feverish today as trading enthusiasm cooled perceptibly and prices turned somewhat irregular.

While the financial sector apparently liked the administration assurance that no war on profits was contemplated, it was felt that other factors would have to be considered in relation to market movements. The activity in rails was about half that of the previous session. Profit-taking was also in evidence. But commission houses were not discouraged, attributing the setting of the list to a "consolidation" of gains.

Commodities were only slightly higher. Grains were exceptionally quiet and narrow, as was cotton. Hogs at Chicago edged up to a new peak for the past three years. The dollar after its heaviness of yesterday, steadied in terms of the leading gold currencies. United States Government securities rallied and prime investment corporation loans improved.

There was a brief and unaccountable flurry in the liquor shares, with National Distillers, American Commercial Alcohol, Schenley and United States Industrial Alcohol getting up major fractions.

The inflationists were a trifle chilled by word that Secretary Morgenthau had stated there would be no change in the present gold and monetary policy, and that the exciting rumors of yesterday were without foundation. The Secretary was said to have been annoyed that the financial areas should pay serious attention to unsubstantiated gossip.

Brokerage houses with foreign connections reported that buying from Europe in selected equities and secondary bonds had expanded considerably during the past few days. Renewal of interest abroad in the American speculative scene was said to be based partly on the growing belief that further dollar devaluation and inflation is probable ultimately.

So far as inflationary prospects are concerned, the belief was expressed in most banking circles that these are not at all imminent. In addition to the fact that depreciation of the currency now would push living costs to further heights, it was pointed out that international monetary conferences must eventuate, soon or late, and that the Presidential prerogative to move the dollar in a 10 per cent range will be quite valuable when such stabilization meetings are held.

Stock traders continued to hope for constructive stimulus from the meetings of the President and his important advisers. Many professional operators, however, were understood to prefer positions on the sidelines pending clarification of various questions which confront the administration.

Predictions of a fall upturn in trade and industry were still of a cautious character. Dun & Bradstreet reported that bank clearings last week totaled $4,190,227,000, a drop of $51,205,000 under the previous week, but a moderate gain over the corresponding 1933 period.

Bank Clearings Drop During Week

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Bank clearings for the leading cities of the country as reported by Dun & Bradstreet totaled $4,190,227,000 last week, against $4,153,040,000 for the corresponding week last year. The figure was $51,205,000 below the preceding week.

The decline in clearings at New York was smaller than in recent weeks, and all but one of the outside centers showed a gain over 1933. At some of the cities in the West and South the improvement continues marked, said the agency.

SEC to Rule On Trades In Unlisted Stocks

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

A MOUNTAIN of problems is facing brokers, traders and investment bankers as a result of the stock exchange act, which will become effective October 1.

Mr. Snyder

Unlisted transactions are subject to many uncertainties as a result of lack of definite rulings for procedure under the new law.

The securities and exchange commission is drafting rules to extend the privilege of trading in unlisted securities on exchanges after the effectiveness of the law and pending action by Congress on the subject.

It must be remembered that there is a distinction between trading in unlisted securities on exchanges and over the counter transactions. The New York Curb Exchange and many of the smaller exchanges permit trading in certain securities which have not met the requirements for regular listing. Transactions in these stocks take place on the floor of the exchanges in practically the same manner as listed securities. Over the counter transactions, however, usually involve deals in stocks which are not handled by any exchange either in their listed or unlisted departments. Such deals are private transactions between brokers and do not involve the use of any exchange facilities.

New Act Directs Unlisted Study

PARAGRAPH F of Section 12 of the securities and exchange act directs the commission to make a study of the subjects of trading in unlisted securities upon exchanges, and to report the results of the study with recommendations to Congress on or before January 3, 1936.

Under the act, a security for which unlisted trading privileges are continued shall be considered a "security registered on a national exchange" within the meaning of the act.

The secretary of the commission has under preparation rules to regulate trading in unlisted securities while making a study of the subject and preparing its recommendations for Congress.

Commission May Grant Exemptions

THE RULES are being drawn up in order to comply with provisions of the act which permit the commission to allow trading in unlisted securities under regulation. These provisions permit companies continuing under unlisted trading privileges to enjoy exemption until June 1, 1936, from certain sections having to do with the furnishing of reports and data about earnings, stockholdings and financial positions.

While the act allows a temporary loophole for unlisted securities, the commission may lay down the conditions surrounding these privileges. In addition, the commission has the power to prevent manipulation in such securities. Accordingly, corporations will not have any great advantage from these provisions.

Capt. Midnight

By LOUIS ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM

CHAPTER II.

"I regret to disturb you," he said, straightening from his obeisance. "But I could not longer postpone announcing my presence. I was sitting there on that stone bench in the corner when you came. I must confess that the beauty of the night, that I had first thought supreme, took at once a lower plane. Why, your hair has the dark bloom of night and your eyes the mystic light of stars—"

"You do flatter me," said Yvonne, gazing up at him. "I do not know your face."

"But you do know every one in New France?"

"Ah, no! Of course not."

She liked his face. It was lean and would be brown in the daylight, and there would be fine wrinkles about his eye corners when he laughed. She could see the whiteness of his teeth now as he smiled whimsically at her.

"You are Yvonne Caron—I could not help but hear some of your conversation with your brother and the other man. You must forgive me. I coughed once or twice, but none of you heeded me. Indeed I wished to come forth, take this fellow who annoyed you by the scruff of the neck and drop him over the parapet. I heard also your condemnation of Jean Pierre Martel, who came to Quebec today. You are not kind to such as he."

"I am not. He is a libertine, a rogue—would you defend him, monsieur?"

"I would be the last to defend him, ma'moiselle—you see, I happen to know him slightly. He is not, however, all bad—I should say there is a thousandth particle of good in him—"

Stranger Makes Love

"Yes," agreed Yvonne. "None can be perfect—even in evil. I am glad you do not defend him. What I said of him I meant, and while it was not intended for other ears than my brother's, I am glad it reaches those of one who did not disagree with my estimate."

The stranger smiled wryly.

"You are very small and sweet—and frank," he said. "And you do not dislike me?"

"You—why should I? I do not know you, but, faith, you have an honest and open face and—and so, I do not dislike you, sir. But it would be well to tell me your name before—"

"Not now, I beg. Do not spoil this perfect moment, please!"

He took her hand in his and raised it to his lips, his eyes did not leave hers. She felt a new, unknown ecstasy, a tingling all through her as if there were in this man some power that, as the magnet with the steel, did attract and hold. His lips lingered on the hand as she slowly withdrew it.

"Why—why—"

The stranger raised his own clenched hand to his lips, tapping the crooked knuckle of his forefinger against them lightly, nervously, his eyes appraisingly upon her.

"Perhaps I should not have," he said slowly. "You most certainly will dislike me more when you—"

"Martel! Monsieur Martel!"

Voices seemed to fill the governor's garden and the sound of trampling feet—feet that trampled even so on Yvonne's heart—trampled out that sweetness that had just had birth there—trampled it down as if it were a young flower before its bloom.

The stranger's face was grim, ashen. He stood stiffly, head bowed.

"M'sieu," said Yvonne, "you have begun early in Quebec to establish—or should I say maintain?—your reputation as a great lover. I assure you, you had begun far better elsewhere than with me. I am persecuted enough by men of your stamp . . ."

She turned sharply away from him, and when his friends, boisterous, laughing, found him, she had taken refuge in the darkness from which Jean Pierre had come.

Sorry for Brother

Jean Pierre, as he walked the hilly, moonlit streets of the town, thought pleasantly of her and angrily of the methods Simon Girard would use to force her into marrying her.

"He would be to her touch as some slimy thing," muttered Jean Pierre. "A pity that brother of hers would allow himself to fall into the lawyer's hands. Rather than see him go to prison or be disgraced, she would martyr herself. I know women. And there seems naught that I can do. Paul has stolen from the royal treasury—not official thefts like Bigot's. It would go hard with him, of a certainty, were they to find him out. And this Girard would, by his looks, prove a worse traitor than Judas—"

Jean Pierre had been assigned a house at Sillery. It was a goodly walk. The bellman, passing in the shadowy streets, like some wraith conjured up from the night, called the hour of two. The city slept. The silence was a mighty and awesome thing that seemed to rise like a mist invisible from the great river flowing soundlessly far below. Jean Pierre loved it—the sky that was the blue tray of the cosmic jeweler, on which, carelessly, haphazardly, with the beauty of undesign, He had thrown the thousand million stars to be as foils for His master-jewel, the moon; and then dark green woods where lived the spirits of old that spoke in the rustling leaves; and the dew-wet grass beneath his feet, a magic carpet—

Held Up in Woods

From such fancies as these, it was rude to be awakened in the darkness of the Sillery woods, where indeed he should not have come afoot—rude to be awakened by menacing words, spoken by one still more menacing and

Synopsis

Yvonne Caron's dreams in the Governor's garden of old Quebec are interrupted by her brother, Paul. He tells her of the latest exploit of Captain Midnight and of the arrival from France of Jean Pierre Martel, who is reputed to be the greatest lover and worst scoundrel in France. Yvonne pleads with Paul not to gamble with Simon Girard. Paul leaves her and Simon appears. He tells her of Paul's theft of government funds and promises protection if she will marry him. He leaves with a warning to "Think well." From the shadows appears a stranger.

Now Go On

sinister. In the moonlight that the over-arching boughs and branches spattered down upon the road, astride a great white steed, black-masqued, black-cloaked, with black tri-cornered hat, sat Capt. Midnight. And like an evil eye was the tiny circular entry to the tunnel of death—the muzzle of the pistol that covered Jean Pierre, who carried only a small sword.

"Another fop, eh!" Capt. Midnight laughed—an awful, jarring, contemptuous laugh. "What is your name, pray?"

"Jean Pierre Martel."

"Eh! The royal pet, the rake, the scamp par excellence! Meseems we are well met. They did surely need your like in Quebec, M. Martel. Bien! Just drop your purse, your jewels, all that you have of value on the road before you. You may keep your reputation—for it I care nothing," Capt. Midnight said grimly.

Jean Pierre did as he was commanded. He knew when death faced him and there was no mistaking the nature of this man. In his harsh voice, his tense, bent-forward position, the steadiness of the gauntleted hand that held the pistol—in all these was death for who should disobey him.

Watch Given Back

"Aye, your watch too," said the highwayman as Jean Pierre hesitated to give up the timepiece which he so much prized—a gift in early youth from his brother.

"Let me keep the watch," he said. "It can be of little value to you. Do that and I shall bring you twice its worth in gold to such place as you may designate."

"You prize it so, eh?"

"Yes—it was a gift to me from my brother—he is dead now."

Capt. Midnight laughed again—that terrible, inhuman laughter that made Jean Pierre shudder and recoil as if he had touched a dead hand. But the laughter died away in a chuckle so soft, so choked, that it was even more appalling.

"A pretty sentiment," said Capt. Midnight gently. "But keep the timepiece and keep the money. Where do you dwell, M. Martel?"

Jean Pierre wondered mightily what concern this should be of his, but he answered civilly enough—

"I live in the gray stone house on the left of the chemin des foulons, a half-mile beyond the flax mill. It is set back on a knoll—"

"Ah!" said Capt. Midnight. "I know it well. I shall visit you soon, no doubt. As a newcomer in the colony you will need some counsel and guidance."

"You will be welcome, monsieur. Though why you should so honor me—"

Promises Visit

"Sapristi! Were you not the greatest rogue in France, and famous, too, just as I am here? Why should we not be friends? You speak as if you were an honest man——"

Jean Pierre looked sharply upward, his eyes narrowed with sudden suspicion, but Capt. Midnight was only a shadow sitting there on his ghostly mount—only a sinister figment of the night.

"Bien!" said Jean Pierre. "You will doubtless find me at home."

"If not, then I shall await your coming," said the highwayman pleasantly. "Now I must away. My business is such as is best pursued in the kindly dark. A lovely time, the night, don't you think? It hides the ugliness of earth and of mankind. Au'voir, M. Martel. Ho! Barca!"

The white horse reared up, forefeet pawing the air; it swung about, galloped off down the tunnel of moonlight and shadow, bearing its masked rider, whose cloak fluttered like a bat's wings behind him.

"The devil!" muttered Jean Pierre, staring after him. "A strange fellow, that. All the time he talked with me I had a suspicion he was mocking me—as if he knew a lot more about me than I was telling him. But he let me keep my watch—and for that I thank him."

Several nights after his encounter with Captain Midnight Jean Pierre was walking restlessly in his garden, and not till the grass was wet and shining under the moon and the deep nocturnal hush had muted every sound did he go into the house, light the candles in his sitting room and kindle the bone-dry birchwood in the great stone fireplace.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

The contest, "When would you rather have your vacation, in the summer or in the winter?" ends today, fellows! Big bunches of letters have been coming into headquarters here at the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, every day since the contest started. Be on the lookout for the winners—they'll probably be announced Saturday. A new contest is announced today in the comic strip.

Junior

We get so many good letters during the wash your neck and ears letter contest that we want to print a few more of them here in the Mail Box just to show the world what good letter writers Junior Patrol members can be. And also to show boys and girls who haven't written any letters for one of the contests yet how easy it is and what kind of letters we like.

This letter from Jane Cooper, of 646 Curtis street, Mt. Washington received honorable mention.

"Dear Junior:

"I tried for a week to wash my own neck and ears, but one day I heard my teacher say to another: 'I guess her mother is away or sick, because she hasn't looked clean all week.' So I decided it's better to let your parents take the dirt off with a good turkish cloth and a little soap. At least 'till you get old enough to do it right yourself. Don't you think so?"

You have a thought here, Jane, and we're obliged for your letter. What do you think, fellows?

School will be starting soon, with almost every Junior Patrol member up one grade higher. You will have new lessons to learn and you will meet new boys and girls and make some of them your friends.

Seems to us that the first few days of school would be a good time to look around for some more members of your patrol.

JUNIOR PATROL PLEDGE

I promise to help children less fortunate than I am.
I promise to do my best to make my parents proud of me.
I promise to watch carefully when crossing streets and to aid other children in keeping out of danger.
I promise to study hard and do errands willingly.
I promise to be a 100% Junior Patrol member.

Signed.....

Date of Birth.....Address.....

School.....

Address this pledge to the JUNIOR PATROL, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. Upon its receipt you will be registered as a member of the JUNIOR PATROL and will be forwarded a membership card and an official emblem.

Kitchen Heroine

Daily Short Short-Story

By PAUL GRAVES

Elliot Bond married Margaret Sargent because he loved her. In doing this he disobeyed his mother, not sure that dictator person was traveling for her health. Elliot acted swiftly and with decision on the dictates of his heart.

From the moment that Margaret had impressed herself on his consciousness at the Empire Club, Elliot knew that the sensation he enjoyed was love. And Margaret was equally disturbed, even before people told her of the staggering sums controlled by the Bond family.

Because Margaret was an unusual person the subject of money had not been discussed. Other demanding subjects were always pleading for their attention. There had been the apartment and the furniture and meeting Elliot's friends and getting settled. Now there was the telegram. It read:

"Arriving home. Chief, tomorrow; meet me. Love,

"MOTHER."

It rang with the terse quality of command that recalled to Elliot his mother's voice. It recalled monologues to which he had been the only listener. There had been long talks, with a constant theme. It was: Though she might never be called upon to demonstrate, the girl of Elliot's choice must be able to care for Elliot as his mother had.

"Can you cook?" Elliot asked Margaret.

He dashed for the phone when he saw her puzzled expression.

"Hello, Aunt Grace? This is E. Yes. I'm in a fix. Yes. I've got to get a cook. A good cook. Mother will be home tomorrow."

There was a silence, Elliot winked at Margaret. He whistled between his teeth. Then he seized a book and wrote rapidly on the flyleaf.

He replaced the receiver and ran to Margaret, clutching the book.

"That was father's sister," he said. "She's swell; she never fails me. I'll be back in half an hour."

Margaret knelt at the doorway through which he had disappeared, for several moments then she smiled. She began humming "Stardust." Then she stopped, and stared out of a window. She went to the kitchen, which she had hardly seen, and examined utensils. She looked at the interior of the icebox, and pulled large pieces of cloth out of the linen closet.

In a little more than an hour the door-knocker sounded. Margaret found the entrance and part of the hall occupied by a beaming Negro woman. She was tremendous.

"Hello!" said Elliot's voice, and then he waved over the Negro woman's shoulder. "Go on in," he invited, and his companion obeyed, dexterously turning sideways as she did.

"Margaret, this is Ada May Jefferson," said Elliot. "She's going to do right by us in the kitchen."

"Howja do?" asked Ada May, ducking.

"Well," said Margaret, running her eye over Ada May's astounding torso, "you certainly look the part."

"Oh, Aunt Grace vouches for her," assured Elliot. "She's never wrong."

"So?" said Margaret, raising her brows. "Let's see if you'll fit in our kitchen."

The table did look nice, Margaret thought. The candles shed a mellow light on the linen, and made the crystalware almost transparent, except where a rim caught the general rays and diffused them. The elder Mrs. Bond was talking about her trip, and Margaret stole her first moment of relaxation since Ada May's arrival behind a mask of polite interest.

"But I worried all the while," said Mrs. Bond. "Elliot's stomach is so sensitive. I've always planned his diet as though he were a baby. Haven't I, dear?"

"Yes, mother," said Elliot.

"I couldn't help but think of him all the hours we spent at the Grand Canyon's rim," Mrs. Bond continued. "The guide threw a stone and told us it would be two minutes before it fell in the river. Elliot's breakfast eggs haunted me the rest of the day."

Margaret gulped some water.

"But, mother," said Elliot, "wasn't everything delicious tonight? Even the lamb—and I can't remember when I've enjoyed lamb like this."

Mrs. Bond gave ground grudgingly. "Yes," she admitted, "it was lovely." She sipped her coffee. "But I had so hoped that Margaret would be interested, actively interested, in her kitchen. Servants are no more than trained when they leave you, you know."

Elliot snorted. "Huh!" Then he said: "Ada May has found her home. She's permanent. And I can't see my honey slaving in a kitchen when I want to enjoy her most, can I?"

It was Mrs. Bond's turn to sniff. "I did, didn't I?"

"Perhaps you'd like to talk with Ada May," suggested Margaret in a discreet voice.

Mrs. Bond considered this a good idea. Ada May appeared when Margaret tinkled the bell. Her curtsey shook the table.

"Well," said Mrs. Bond stiffly. "Can you always cook as well as you have tonight?"

"I dunno," grinned Ada May.

"You don't know?" Mrs. Bond was irritated. "Why not?"

"Cuz I ain't tech'd a thing yet," said Ada May. Her grin split wider. "All I does is taste. Miss Mahgret dun cooked ev'ry last vittle on dat table."

Tomorrow: "Sauce for Goose," by Beckley Clapp, tells of a bad case of hay fever that afflicted a modern wife. Her bright young husband decreed a "no meat" diet for both. Each regaled the other with tales of vegetables, but the truth finally came to light.

-:- ODD FACTS -:-

One of the strangest conditions of the human body is chromidrosis, a disorder which causes colored perspiration. In such cases the sweat glands exude violet, green, yellow, blue, milky-white and even coal-black perspiration.

An artificial eye invented by Dr. Vladimir Zworykin, a New Jersey research engineer, possesses an "electrical memory" which automatically records the objects as its rays discovers them. So penetrating is this instrument, called the iconiscope, hat it is held capable of seeing the germs of the common cold.

To bathe a temple deity, the Maharajah of Travancore led thousands of his followers on a three-mile walk down to the sea, marching at their head, barefooted, stripped to the waist, and brandishing a drawn sword.

The principal cause of blindness among the 3,000,000 sightless persons throughout the world today is trachoma, the result of unbalanced diet, insufficient food, and unsanitary living conditions. About 65 per cent of these unfortunates are natives of China and India, the inhabitants of which countries comprise 40 per cent of the world's population.

COOK-COOS

THERE ARE GIANTS IN THESE DAYS

Now that the nation is thoroughly aroused over the problem of removing harmful irritants from motion picture theaters, what could be more fitting than a blast of publicity for Dr. Abanell G. Anewith? Not generally known are the results of his investigation of the effects of movie-house pipe-organ solos on the young, middle-aged and old of America. The doctor's interest was first aroused when it suddenly occurred to him that after hearing an organ solo he always went home and threw ash trays at his dear old mother, in spite of her vigorous protests against such treatment. He wondered if others did the same and began to make inquiries.

Everywhere he turned he found broken homes, blasted hopes, immorality and crime. After hearing a pipe-organ soloist, men either went home and beat their wives or didn't go home at all. There was the case of Alonzo B——, reformatory inmate, who had started on his life of crime by picking the pockets of those in adjacent seats while the organ played. When asked how it had first happened, this unfortunate youth said: "I dunno. I just felt like it. And besides I couldn't think of nuthin' to do wit' me hands." There was Michael K——, still paying heart balm to a totally strange woman he had proposed to out of sheer boredom during a medley of popular airs. But why go on? (Applause.)

What Abanell proposes is that all theater managers who feel they must have organ soloists be required by law to install a cocktail bar in the lobby. Said bar to open for business when the solo starts and close in time for patrons to get back for Mickey Mouse.

There were 11 events in the blessed column this week. Friday evening, out there by the Law corner, where Frank Johnson lives, we saw a strange large bird flying low, that we just know was a stork. Was there some connection between these facts?

Where the Dawn Comes Up Like Thunder

Seven Orange but Chinese students have broken their 108 oriental ropes for the American rah rah.

They also pitched the York college circus which wears their tent and rue.

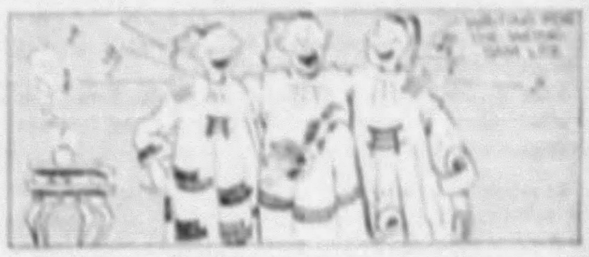
At the graduation exercises at the Humphrey School of Quotation Music the valedictorian chose for his theme that classic ballad, "When Your Heart's in Pin Your Quick Ear in Your Ear."

"Tea Pin Tee" was regular with the street hawkers on account it is an invitation. Two thousand showed up with their appetites.

"If I Had the Wings of a Swallow" by the Mongolian comic. Add a couple of shark fins and throw in the sea. Serve hot.

Tin Pan Alley is doing unanimous work among the regulars. Any adult and ear can get in a Chinese orchestra.

Our Chinese theatrical song hits to Peiping under the estimated title, "Waiting for the Wing Ham Lee."



"Zoolanda Wants Carry Me to the Jim House" is being featured by the baritone Salesmen with good results. The boys on the yunks ain't particular about the rose staying away from their door provided it doesn't turn the knob.

"Thank You for a Lovely Evening" is the favorite of the Chung How night watchmen as they turn in their opium pipes to the desk clerk.

So you see that Donaldson, Berlin and Youmans are doing their share in making America the leading musical nation of the world. Gershwin ain't so hot over there although his "Wrap Relic in Blue" was the marching song of the famous Cantonese route army.

"My Old Kan Tucker Home" is subtly sung. So is "Ju Jim Lullaby." The Chinese have an ear for melody. Add a nose for singing it through.

"You Owe It All to Me" is naturally the commercial serenade of the hill bandits. It has been sung to assorted audiences on the Mai Kum Low Circuit and on the Aar Kay Oh Vaio.

The bandits report business is great since they advertised their caves as being 30 degrees lower than the street. And some of the caves are low over there.

Music lovers will please write in for more information.

STARS AND STRIPES

Some industries find it hard to sleep under a blanket code these hot nights.

According to our investigators we have two kinds of drought sufferers, a condition which keeps the relief workers going from bad to worse.

Borah insists that a baker has a right to sell bread at a lower price than that fixed by the NRA. Evidentially, the Idaho Senator knows which side of the question our bread is buttered on.

With eggs selling at $1.50 a dozen in the Arctic they must be about as scarce as little tents.

In that battle between a baseball player and a saxophone player the baseball player scored two hits and the saxophone player one run.

Somebody bet Joe Brown his mouth wasn't as big as the mouth of the Mississippi River. Joe won because his mouth hasn't suffered from the drought.

Inexplicable Favoritism

Texas, Too, Complains of Federal Discrimination in Relief Grants

Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins' insistence that Pennsylvania match federal relief contributions, while allowing some other states to receive federal aid without the payment of a cent of their own money, prompted the question in these columns recently if Pennsylvania was being punished for having gone for Hoover.

That evidently is not the explanation for this queer favoritism, for Texas, more Democratic than Pennsylvania is Republican, also complains of discrimination.

In respect to the relief situation there is a striking parallel between the two states. Texas, too, has been warned that federal relief grants will cease unless the state, which has already provided more than ten million dollars of its own money, furnishes more. The Texas Legislature has accordingly been summoned to meet in special session next week to deal with the emergency, just as it is expected the Pennsylvania Legislature soon will be—and this notwithstanding that the Legislatures of both states will convene in regular session in January.

It was asserted at a meeting of the Texas Relief Commission that the federal relief authorities have "treated Texas shamefully," and the influential Texas Weekly, a journal not given to thoughtless outbursts, says:

". . . It seems unexplainable to us that the state of Louisiana, with the largest city in the South, should not be required to put up a penny, while being granted a per capita of federal funds considerably more than twice the per capita granted Texas . . . The point we are making . . . is why the rule of requiring the state government to match dollar for dollar with the federal government is being rigidly enforced against Texas and not against other states—Louisiana, for example. Is the Kingfish dictating terms to the federal government also? The question is important for the reason that the time is coming when Texas is not going to be able to go on matching dollar for dollar."

Pennsylvania has been asking the same question that is now propounded by Texas. Why the favoritism?

If Mr. Hopkins wishes to retain public confidence, he can scarcely continue to withhold an explanation.

The Summer Opera Plan

The Sponsors Are To Be Congratulated On Their Activity

Our compliments to the sponsors of the civic light opera project on their activity and progress!

Several weeks ago a dozen or more of Pittsburgh's leading citizens were invited to a luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce to hear how light opera, given in a park under municipal auspices on summer evenings, has flourished in St. Louis. A charge is made for the better seats, but the others are free. It is a non-profit enterprise; earnings are used for improvements.

The Pittsburghers were impressed. All perceived how desirable it would be to have such entertainment here. But they also saw formidable difficulties.

It was pointed out, for example, that under the terms of the grant of Schenley Park to the city, if strictly interpreted, no charge could be made for a public performance held there.

It was also said that enabling legislation would have to be obtained at Harrisburg before Pittsburgh could go into the opera business.

To their credit be it said, the leaders in the movement looked at the difficulties from the outset not as impassable barriers but merely as obstacles to be removed. And they have set out to remove them.

Highland Park is now being considered. Charles M. Stotz, the architect, is drawing plans for an auditorium to cost about $200,000. It is proposed to provide seats for from 8,000 to 10,000 persons, and parking space for 3,000 automobiles. A Federal loan will be sought.

Harmar D. Denny, Jr., chairman of the movement, has appointed a number of committees to look after various phases of the undertaking, and if things go according to schedule we should have a season of light opera next summer.

Let everybody who can, help. The plan will add much to Pittsburgh's attractiveness and prestige.

Six Million Illiterates

Only a Federal Department of Education Can Solve This Problem

Among the many experiments which the Roosevelt Administration is making there is one at least of which all thoughtful Americans will approve.

That is the employment of 40,000 needy teachers to fight illiteracy throughout the nation.

Despite our boasted system of free public education we have an appallingly large number of inhabitants who cannot read or write, and who are therefore unfitted for many of the responsibilities of citizenship.

Estimates vary, but it seems that there are fully five million illiterates in the United States over 10 years of age, and that the true figure may be nearly six million.

No democracy can function properly when it has so high a percentage of illiterates among its people.

As the Hearst newspapers have repeatedly pointed out, the existence of this large class is a national problem—one which must be dealt with by the national government and one which requires for its complete solution a national Department of Education.

Such a department is yet to be established.

However, the anti-illiteracy program which the administration seems resolved to carry out will be welcomed by all.

It is a recognition of the fact that education is a matter of national concern, and that it is as much entitled to Federal funds as—let us say—farming or livestock raising.

Eventually the government may decide that the training of both children and adults is as important a subject as the rearing of cattle or hogs.

The latter are represented in the President's Cabinet by the Secretary of Agriculture.

The former do not enjoy a similar distinction, but let us hope that in due time they will.

"Der Tag"

Hitler Sunday has come and gone.

Karl von Wiegand, in his despatch to the Hearst newspapers, described the momentous event as an "election in which Hitler sought to permit not one opposing voice."

Actually, there were 5,000,000 opposing voices—but there were more than 38,000,000 "jas." Why? Mr. von Wiegand reports:

"I talked with many anti-Hitlerites . . . Without a single exception they all said they would vote 'ja.' There were shivering memories of June 30, with the names of its long death list still unrevealed by the Government."

And so, ONE MAN in Germany is today "Fuehrer-Chancellor, Commander-in-Chief of the Army, Navy and Air, Chief Prosecutor and Supreme High Judge!"

What lesson does the remorseless progress of autocracy convey to America?

One lesson only. As the New York American said editorially in discussing the "bloody purge" to which Mr. Wiegand refers:

"Such, alas too often, is the fate of nations when lured away from their constitutional moorings.

"Democracy, with all its shortcomings, is still the ark of free government!

"If democracy goes, liberty goes with it.

"When liberty is lost, all freedom of action is ended, as well as freedom of thought and speech.

"AMERICA MUST BE WATCHFUL AND ALERT NOT TO JEOPARDIZE ITS DEMOCRACY!

"It must cling to the foundations of its freedom and to the muniments of its liberties—tenaciously, and, if need be, desperately!

"With every surrender of liberty the next surrender becomes easier—harder to avert.

"When we see what DESPOTISM IS and DOES we should realize that LIBERTY IS THE MOST PRECIOUS POSSESSION OF MANKIND!"

Should She Leave Him?

By Winifred Black

"IF SHE really loved him," said the man, "she'd stay with him, no matter what he does, or has done, or is going to do.

"A woman who loves a man doesn't pack up and leave him like that. She sticks by him through thick and thin; yes, even through an affair with another woman, or a dozen other women. She loves him and she's going to have him, in spite of all the other women in the world.

"She knows he'll come back to her again, but she must never let him know that she knows. His pride won't stand that. He wants to think he's fooling her all the time. That makes his other affairs twice as interesting, and it makes him sort of remorseful and tender toward her.

"But if she finds out, and lets him know she's found out, he'll never bear the sight of her again. For then he isn't the wise, clever man of the world he thought he was; he's just a plain fool, and his wife knows it, and he knows it—and he will never be comfortable with her again.

"My advice to this friend of yours is to stick close to her home, and not quite so close to her man. Let him step along with the others for a while. It won't hurt him much, and it will hurt her very little, if she looks at it the right way.

"Then, when she's getting on in years, there he'll be, all devotion and attention, and they can slip down into age in a kind of pleasant comfort.

"A woman alone in the world, a grass widow, is always pitiful to me. She's had everything, and she didn't care enough for it to make a determined fight to get it back again.

"No, I don't believe this woman really loves this man. If she did, she wouldn't leave him."

"I don't agree with you at all," said the woman. "I love Betty, and I understand her. And I know the reason she's leaving her husband is because she really loves him, and she cannot bear to live with him when she knows he is trying to deceive her.

"She's forgiven him twice before. Once it was a grass widow, as you call her, and once it was a young thing of 18 or so. This time it's the wife of his friend, and Betty just cannot live through another of Joe's 'affairs'. She loves him too much, and she's too honest and too genuine to pretend any longer.

"She just can't play the game a minute longer.

"Yes, she'll lose the protection of Joe's name and his position, and she won't have the fine home, or half the fine dresses, or many of the fine friends Joe has brought her. But she isn't worldly enough to care about these things. All she cares about is Joe's love and fidelity. If she can't have them, she'd rather never see Joe again."

And so they talked together—the man and the woman who both knew Betty and Joe. And tell me, now—which do you think was right?

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

We're All Putting On an Act

Getting along with other people; getting past that wall of strangeness which seems to surround them . . . there's the hardest job you have to tackle. And unless you can manage it, you'll be an embittered, 'onely failure all your days.

But how can it be managed? Some people seem to mix so easily! There must be a trick to it.

There is—a trick that begins in your own mind. If you want to get next to the other fellow, you must realize first of all that there's really no "wall of strangeness" around him. The wall is in you, yourself . . . in your own ignorance and fear . . . your secret feeling that you're "different."

We all have that feeling when we're young. What a liar that chap was who said that youth was the most carefree time in life! Actually, youth is the most bewildered, embarrassed and generally harassed period in our existence.

I remember how it was with myself at 17. A gawky, gangly girl, always falling over my own feet, full of fears and fizz, never knowing whether I wanted to laugh or cry, turn cartwheels, throw bricks or stalk haughtily past an unworthy world.

But of one thing I was sure—I must put on an act. I must never, never let other people know how I felt . . . never let them guess how close tears lay beneath my cocky smile; how cold was the fear behind my impudent swagger; what depths of loneliness and hurt were masked by my temper and snootiness!

They must never know, because if they did they couldn't possibly understand. And they'd jeer, or scold, or pity, or take advantage, and make life even harder to bear. They "couldn't understand." I was so sure of that—so sure that no one else felt as I did, that no one else hid such a tangled, tempestuous life beneath a laughing mask.

I must put on an act. That was my first lesson in grown-up behavior. With my teens I began putting on that act. And I'm still doing it—though for very different reasons.

It was a lonely business at first. It formed that "wall of strangeness" which shut me away, and which I blamed on the other fellow. But at last the wall went down. It went down under the crashing discovery that everyone else was putting an act, too.

That discovery didn't happen in a dramatic second. I didn't learn it from books, nor was it revealed in sermons. It came slowly, over long intervals, as I went along, living with other people, working, playing, fighting, grieving, dreaming, fearing with them—sharing my life with them as they shared theirs with me.

It was through that sharing that I came at last to see that there was nothing in my life which wasn't also in theirs—and nothing in their lives which wasn't also in mine.

We were all of a piece. In our goodness or our badness, in our gladness or sadness, we were all of a piece. No one was "different." And in one thing we were all desperately alike. We were all putting on an act.

We began putting on that act as children to protect our young vanity and fear. And some sick souls retained it always for that same reason. But healthier spirits went on wearing wise, strong, cheerful masks, out of civilized consideration for the other fellow.

Getting along with other humans . . . getting past their strangeness . . . getting next to the secret places of their lives . . . is the hardest yet the most necessary job we all must tackle. But it will not be hard when once you've learned that universal secret—

We're all putting on an act.

Just as there is a sob behind YOUR smile . . . a grin behind YOUR frown . . . hunger behind YOUR sneer . . . hurt behind YOUR anger . . . fear behind YOUR arrogance . . . and a need for loving kindness beneath every act or mood . . . so it is with the Other Fellow.

You're not "different"—nor is he. And he'll give you all he has, including himself, if you'll just remember that fact.

Will Rogers Says:

Will Rogers

IRKUTSK, Aug. 23.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Pine trees, low mountains, beautiful valleys today. Distances are far here and names have to be long to reach the next town: Petrovskyisavod and Verhneudinsk. A mess of nationalities on this train, English, German, Russian, Swiss, Schecks, American Indians, Japanese, and the smartest of all is a Chinese, a noted authority on Far Eastern affairs. Nothing in the world's smarter than one Chinaman and nothing dumber than two. Mr. Roosevelt told me to scout him some new brain material. I am signing this bird up.

Yours, WILL.

Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

After Storm

As always after storm, the shore is strewn
With strange mementoes of the lashing waves;
The brilliance of the slowly-rising
moon
Lights secrets torn away from ocean caves.
A shell lies here like none that I have seen,
And here the slim, bright body
of a fish;
Through water flashing, once it must have been
As winged-swift as love's most ardent wish.
Now all the Titan rage of elements
Has dwindled to a whisper and a song;
The breezes scarcely stir the leafy tents
Of camphor trees, the gay waves dance along.
Only the broken treasures on the sands
Show how the storm rent ocean with her hands.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

You are surprised when you meet a man who is really important.

Those who have attained the greatest national or international fame are, except in rare instances, modest and approachable persons.

Those in charge of large undertakings are usually companionable.

Particularly so when not pressed by important business matters.

When occasion demands they devote all their time and attention to the requirements of their business.

It is the fellow at the head of a comparatively small business who is uppish.

He has a greatly exaggerated idea of his accomplishments.

He does not consider the fact that the business he directs is small compared with other establishments making the same product.

He is susceptible to flattery and favors those who kow-tow to him.

And how little it requires to place such a man in high favor with himself.

He becomes lord and master of his little domain.

In reality he is a little fellow favored by circumstances.

If you wish to become famous be modest about your accomplishments.

This is what denotes the really big, capable man.

The President Promises Civil Service Reform

By James T. Williams, Jr.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has finally taken cognizance of the rising tide of public indignation over the debauching of the federal service by the sacrifice of the merit system of making appointments and the substitution of the spoils system.

Upon the receipt of an earnest appeal from the National Civil Service Reform League to call a halt on the extension of the spoils system, President Roosevelt let it be known that he is still in favor of the merit system, still an advocate of civil service reform, and would like to see the classified civil service of the federal government not only maintained but made stronger.

This will be heartening news to all advocates of the merit system. They hope that the President will soon suit vigorous action to his eloquent words to the newspapers in support of civil service reform.

Meantime the situation in the federal service is clearly described in the letter which the President has just received from the chairman and secretary of the executive committee of the National Civil Service Reform League.

Political Spoilsmen Raid Federal Service

It seems that more than a year ago the President assured the league in a letter now on file at its headquarters that he hoped the merit system would be extended and improved during his term of office.

How far from realization this hope of Mr. Roosevelt's is, the record of his administration to date makes painfully manifest. Instead of extending the merit system new federal agencies have been established employing some 90,000 persons, practically all of whom have been excepted from the civil service law.

This raid of the political spoilsmen of his party has been made on the federal service in the face of the President's assurance to the Civil Service Reform League more than a year ago that "the merit system in civil service is in no danger at my hands, but on the contrary, I hope that it will be extended and improved during my term as President."

To demonstrate the ruthlessness with which the spoils system has been extended during the present administration the National Civil Service Reform League officials called to the President's attention an order recently issued by the Secretary of the Interior. This order requires that each recommendation for appointment to a non-civil service position in the reclamation service "shall be supported by clearance from some appropriate official in the Democratic party organization." Political clearance is defined in the order as meaning either the indorsement or the consent of the chairman of the Democratic central committee, or the chairman of the Democratic central committee in the county or state in which the applicant claims legal residence.

Evils Pointed Out By Reform League

THIS is the method devised by the chairman of the Democratic National Committee and of the New York Democratic Central Committee, who is serving President Roosevelt as Postmaster General, to build up the vast bureaucracy of which Mr. Farley is both the architect and arch-manipulator.

These are some of the circumstances under which in its appeal to the President to halt the spread of the spoils system the National Civil Service Reform League offered these respectful observations:

"In view of your own frank expressions of concern for the integrity of the merit system, the league cannot but regret the issuance of the recent executive order, dated June 28, removing from the competitive classified service, with your authority, all positions in the National Soldiers' Home at Johnson City, Tenn. These positions were placed in the competitive service by an executive order pursuant to authority vested in the President by an act of Congress on July 3, 1926. Most of them are held by employes of long service and proved competence. They could hardly be considered in any sense as other than routine administrative posts. Your consent to their restoration to the political class cannot be otherwise than disappointing to those to whom your assurance of last August was given."

It seems to be doubtful whether President Roosevelt was correctly informed what the effect of his Johnson City order would be when he signed it last month. Upon his return from Hawaii he appeared to be under the impression that all he had done was to require that these appointees should be given civil service examinations to test their fitness to hold their jobs.

However good may be the intentions of the President, however high his hopes for the extension of the merit system, his intentions will be balked and his hopes dashed as long as he permits Mr. Farley to run both the national committee and the New York central committee of the party in power from a seat in the cabinet and with all the power and patronage attaching to the office of Postmaster General.

Human Side of the News

The Character of the Clientele of Saratoga Springs, Famous New York Spa, Undergoes a Change

By Edwin C. Hill

A FEW years ago, I met my old friend Col. Joe Hayward in the lobby of the Grand Union Hotel at Saratoga. Joe, a track follower, well along in his seventies, was erect and vigorous. Celebrating our chance meeting, we engaged in a friendly scuffle. Joe's muscles were hard as iron and he could have put me down with no trouble at all.

"How do you do it at your age?" I asked.

"I exercise two hours a day and take the mineral baths here," he replied. "I have to keep myself like an athlete, you know."

"But why?"

"It's the only way I can keep up with my drinking."

He was quite serious. And, in that day of the rococo splendors of old Saratoga, before prohibition and before even a hint of a world depression, I found many other ruddy, vigorous, affluent men who used one of the greatest natural spas in the world to condition them for industrious and systematic drinking. "Boiling rich drunks," was Saratoga's great industry in those days, as a local physician rather baldly stated it to me.

Great Change Noted at Springs

IRE-VISIT Saratoga. In the years between, the life-giving springs have kept on flowing, John Barleycorn has departed and returned, a new flock of touts, fixers and railbirds has come along, and in the lobby of one of those great, sprawling yellow and ochre hotels you "could shoot a der," as George Jessel once put it. The race track crowd, with their $40 pajamas, rakishly drooped, and their leated pants, look much the same, but when one visits the springs he realizes that a cataclysmic change has come over the old Saratoga.

Where such famous whips as James Hazen Hyde used to drive up with their tally-hos, all hands set for a sulphur bath after an evening of revelry, there are earnest and serious burghers, driving up with their flivvers, bringing their wives and babies; there are bescheitled East Side mothers and old men with fine, ascetic, rabbinical faces fervently expounding to younger groups the curative properties of the many and varied mineral waters which flow miraculously from the soil—springs which George Washington used to visit and which he tried to buy.

Foreign Born Flock to Spa

THERE are hard-driven white collar folk, allaying or possibly banishing those occupational ailments of the city dweller, in their brief holiday. The foreign born are there in legion, for, in Europe, medical science has gone far in expounding to multitudes the therapy of water containing ammonia, lithium, potassium, sodium or barium—these are only a few of the curative ingredients of these waters of limitless flow.

The state of New York, with both Alfred E. Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt helping a lot, has made possible this easy public access to the springs and their uses, under scientific administration, as one detail of a vast health program. To date, the state has spent about five million dollars in the two splendid bath houses now in use and on the great spa which will be completed by next summer. Of this amount two million dollars was state funds and the remaining three million was obtained from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The new [illegible]a is being built with the consultation of Dr. Granz M. Groedel, the great German cardiac specialist, now in New York.
